A 'Festival' Of Dairy This Issue

Lancaster Farming Celebrates Dairy Month In Features, Columns, Recipes

Milking goats is a family occupation for Leid children Emily, 8; David, 15; Stephen, 4; and Emily, 10. They are the children of Titus and Mabel Leid, owners of Wildflower Goat Farm, Stevens. The family dairy consists of 180 animals, including the 40 replacements the Leids raise each year. "This kind of job is good for the children because the goats are their friends, so they don't mind seeing them every day," says Titus. The herd consists of an assortment of Saanen, Alpine, Toggenburg, and Nubian crossbreeds. Read more on page B18.

Edition Highlights Dairy Families, Changing Industry

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I
ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was light to fair and generally typical of midweek trading as buyers adopted a cautious and selective posture. Offerings of boneless-skinless breasts were at least sufficient, however, bone-in breasts ranged balanced to instances tight. Wings were readily available. Dark meat cuts were adequate. Movement through retail and distributive channels was about fair, in addition, dealers were only noting a limited air of guarded optimism approaching the first of the month weekend. The market tone was steady to fully steady on bone-in breasts, about steady on the balance.

ostly prices were unchanged on whole and whites, but higher on yolks when compared to previous week's trading. Trade sentiment was steady on whites, fully steady on whole, and firm on yolks. Trading and demand improved but was still in a light to moderate range. Supplies were adequate for immediate trade needs, although yolks were held with increased confidence. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending May 18, 2002 were 4% higher than the previous week and a year ago.

Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL YOUNG TURKEY PARTS AND BULK MEAT, Frozen, unless specified, cents per lb, delivered first receivers, part and full trucklots, as of May 28, 2002.

Trade sentiment was steady to fully steady on fresh tom breast meat and fresh destrapped tenderloins. Light inquiry was noted on fresh tom breast meat for prompt shipments for post holiday needs, otherwise, demand fair with some buyers taking their normal commitments for next week. Offerings ranged from light at best for prompt deliveries to adequate for deferred. Domestic and export trading was light on all items with activity centered on frozen young hen thigh meat and hen 2-joint wings for domestic shipments.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to cook whole birds was fair to good and sufficient in keeping the bulk of seller offerings in decent balance for immediate delivery. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 57 to 71 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady. In the parts complex, inquiry centered mainly on balanced to tight supplies of bone-in breasts. Other cuts were irregularly balanced but generally adequate.

ACTUAL SLAUGHTER WEEK ENDING 05/25/2002 WAS 12,431,212 5.15 LBS.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MOON ON EQUATOR, JUNE 5

FEAST OF ST. BONIFACE

This year, June 5 is astrologically favorable for pruning to discourage growth You might say that it's what St Boniface did, the patron saint of brewers and tailors whose feast day is on June 5 St Boniface was in Hessia, circa AD 723, when he used an ax to cut down the six foot wide tree called Thor's oak Evidently, he intended to convert a tribe of pagans by demonstrating his power over their Norse deity Some stories hold that he used the oak boards to build a chapel St Boniface was educated as a Benedictine monk and wrote the first Latin grammar book in England

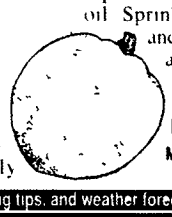
TIP OF THE WEEK

When buying oak trees from a garden nursery, look for native species—or start with local acorns.

ACORN-SQUASH RINGS

2 acorn squashes, peeled and seeded
1 yellow onion, peeled and sliced
3 4 cup vegetable or chicken broth
1 teaspoon olive oil
1 2 cup shredded cheese, cheddar or Swiss
1 4 cup chopped fresh parsley

Preheat oven to 400°F Grease a 13x9 inch baking pan Carefully slice the acorn squashes into rings inch thick Cover bottom of pan with several squash rings, place onion slices over rings, and add rest of squash rings on top Add broth and olive oil Sprinkle with cheese and parsley Cover and bake for 30 to 45 minutes, uncover for the last 10 minutes



Makes 4 to 6 servings

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Oak before ash, all wet and splash
Ash before oak, all fire and smoke

If June be sunny, harvest comes early

The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.

OPINION

Why We Must Grow The Pennsylvania Dairy Industry

N. Alan Bair
Director Of Dairy Industry Relations
Penn State

"We need to grow the Pennsylvania and northeast dairy industry if we are to survive" is the message industry leaders across the region are clearly communicating.

Logically, this raises many legitimate questions in the minds of everyone involved in the industry. I challenge every producer, processor, service, and supply representative, banker, educator, regulator and consumer to understand the logic behind the need for growth, and to develop and live a personal plan that supports keeping the dairy industry strong in the Northeast.

Total milk production in the U.S. is responding to a growing demand. Growth in the dairy industry is clearly west of our Pennsylvania and Northeast milk supply and large consumer population. We have processing capacity for an additional two billion more pounds of milk in the Northeast. Our challenge is to be part of the national growth and reverse our regional trend of declining production.

Even a casual glance at the numbers shows that the dairy industry in Pennsylvania and the Northeast has not been keeping up with demand or with the rest of the national industry. Pennsylvania milk production through March is below last year with 19,000 fewer cows. This is a continuing trend. Our production per cow continues to grow, but at a pace slower than other leading dairy states.

The bottom line on growth is that if Pennsylvania does not grow, we stand the obvious possibility of losing our processing capacity in the region and, therefore, losing our valuable markets. Investors in processing plants will invest in growth areas and not in areas of declining production. Additionally, if Pennsylvania continues to decline in cow numbers, dairy farms and total production, we will quickly lose the important infrastructure that supports production. Many Pennsylvania producers clearly understand the loss of production infrastructure because they already have fewer choices and drive more miles for service, supplies, and markets.

To encourage continued investment in our dairy processing structure in the Northeast, we must show positive signs that we will continue to be a major source of milk. We are working from a current position of strength and have great opportunities in the future if we act now. This is a win-win situation for all segments of the industry from producer to consumer, but it will take effort and commitment from everyone.

How we individually respond to this opportunity is up to each individual and company. It is very important that the industry work together in a supportive atmosphere. Currently we have a large percentage of relatively small farms and a few larger farms — a profile that I expect will slowly change over time.

The truth is that we need all our farms, small and large, to maintain a strong industry. Growth of a farm comes in many forms but all must be driven by profit. There is no question that our region of the country can compete very favorably in production profitability.

Probably the greatest challenge to our industry in Pennsylvania is attitude. Those are harsh words, but if you find yourself beginning to boil after reading this far, I ask you to check your attitude. Are you positive about the dairy industry and your future in it? We all need to be supportive of each other in positive ways. Attitudes are contagious, so be sure you are spreading a positive one.

If we want our next generation to be part of this industry, then we need to be positive. Encourage and support your neighbor — their success is crucial to your success.

The need is evident, the consequences obvious, the opportunities great, and the time is now. If you do not see the need for growth of this important industry, then challenge the opinion. Ask the questions, start a dialog on your own, and get some answers. Push, lead or, at the very least, get out of the way, because we must all work together to get our industry in this state and region moving down the fast track of profitability and long-term sustainability.

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler
Lancaster County Extension Director

To Evaluate Corn Fields Damaged By Late Frosts

The week of May 20, Pennsylvania experienced several consecutive days of record low temperatures with many parts of the state having several mornings with frost. Experiencing frost in late May is rare to begin with and having multiple frosts this late is truly historic. The frost resulted in damage to corn in central Pennsylvania and some other regions of the state.

Gregory Roth, associate professor of agronomy in Penn State's crop and soil sciences department, said farmers should know the factors affecting frost damage. Roth explains that good planting conditions and warm weather in late April resulted in rapid emergence and development for many of the earliest planted fields. Some fields had corn with two to three fully developed leaves.

"When the frost hit, many of these early-planted fields were hit," Roth said. "Corn fields that were full of growing small plants last week now appear to be very sick. Producers are wondering how this will affect their crop and if they need to replant.

"The severity of the damage varied depending on the location and the size of the corn. Generally drier, tilled fields or low-lying fields are most at risk, but even the absence of those factors did not save some fields from damage. In some locations, where the temperature was below 28 degrees for more than several hours, plants may have experienced a lethal dose of frost damage and the young plants may not recover. For instance, low temperatures of 27 and 29 were reported for Huntingdon and Altoona, respectively, on the morning of May 20, with lower temperatures likely in outlying areas."

Roth said the key to assessing the effects of the frost damage is to be patient and wait for several days to see if the plants are showing signs of recovery. Usually after two to three days of 70-degree temperatures, new growth will be initiated and be visible in the plant's whorl (the base of the plant where the leaves originate). Under cool conditions, it may take a few more days to see recovery.

"Frost damage most often results in the death of above-ground plant parts," he explained. "Frost-damaged leaves will blacken and turn straw-colored in a few days. The growing point of the plant is located deep inside the whorl and is below the soil surface until the plant has about five fully emerged leaves. Usually small corn will recover quickly from frost damage and in two weeks will show little sign of injury. In this episode, because of the severity and multiple frost events, I am concerned that the frost injury may be more severe than usual."

If all the plants don't recover, Roth said, producers should assess the population of plants and decide whether the fields need to be replanted. Guidelines for replanting can be found in the corn production section of the Penn State Agronomy Guide, which can be found on the Web at http://agguide.agronomy.psu.edu/CM/Sec4toc.html. The replant charts indicate that for many fields the yield potential of a field with a population of 16,000-18,000 planted on April 25 is about the same as a full stand planted in late May. So even in fields that have been thinned by frost, replanting may not be beneficial.

The 2002 edition of the Agronomy Guide is available for $9. For ordering information, call the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713. To order using VISA or MasterCard, call toll-free, (877) 345-0691.

To Monitor Frost Damage In Wheat

Capitol region agronomy agent Mark Goodson reported freezing can cause severe damage to wheat during the early stages of heading, especially before pollination. The type of injury varies with exposure time, but floret sterility could result or the heads could be trapped in the boot. Heads may be distorted as they attempt to emerge as the stems elongate.

Newly emerged heads are quite vulnerable to freezing injury when the temperatures drop to 30 degrees Fahrenheit or below. Signs of freezing injury can be seen within a few days after freezing. Injury can occur to the entire head or only a portion of the head.

Most frequently the head tip is injured. Damaged florets will turn white and the tissues will shrivel. Yield loss will be minimal if only the top florets of the head are injured. Otherwise, if entire heads are affected, the loss may be proportional to the number of heads killed.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

OF BURDENS AND BLESSINGS

Background Scripture:
Psalms 1; 19.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 19:1-6.

For the next nine weeks we will dealing with the Book of Psalms. Next to some of the sayings of Jesus, the Psalms are the most frequently remembered and quoted scriptures for Christians. The reason, of course, is that so many of them speak to us in our own life situations.

While we are studying some of these psalms, let us remember that this book is an anthology of hymns and prayers or liturgies that were composed between the 10th and second or third centuries B.C. It is often referred to as the "hymnbook" of the Bible. These songs and poems were probably intended to accompany acts of worship in the temple.

Though the psalms may seem quite similar, there are eight different types: Enthronement Hymn (celebrating the Lord's kingship), Songs of Zion (devotion to the Holy City), Laments (seeking deliverance), Songs of Trust, Thanksgivings, Sacred History (recounting God's dealing with the nation), Royal Psalms (for a coronation or royal wedding), and Wisdom Songs (meditations on life and the ways of God).

To Perish Or Prosper

At the time that the book was assembled, Psalm 1, a wisdom psalm, was probably selected to serve as an introduction, preface, or prologue to the whole collection. The message reflects typical Old Testament teaching: the righteous prosper and the wicked perish. Immediately, some of us protest: What about Job? What about Jesus? What about most of the Apostles?

The psalmists would, I think, readily admit that there have been, are, and will be exceptions. For some of the righteous, the prospering came and comes in a more ultimate form. So living in a righteous manner does not guarantee a life of untrammeled good fortune. But taking into consideration large numbers of people, those who live in a righteous manner will tend to be "blessed," as Psalm 1 indicates.

A number of polls and studies support this concept, indicating that people who attend worship with some regularity are happier, healthier, and more productive. They have also determined that couples who pray together generally have happier and more fulfilling marriages.

When we were children, some of us grumbled, probably silently, that our parents made us go to church whether we wanted to or not. Some of us may even have vowed that, when we would become parents, we would not force our children into this family pattern. Of course, many do not, but often I am surprised and amused to find parents requiring of their children what they themselves as children resisted.

In The Long Run

Why? Because, no matter how we may have reacted as children or youth, as adults we often realize that life needs a spiritual base. That does not mean that you and your family are guaranteed to escape all tribulations, but that in the long run your lives will be significantly blessed by the life of which the psalmist is writing. Sometimes that spiritual life is all that may keep you going when life seems to fall down around you.

The psalmist says "Blessed is the man . . ." and it means "O how happy the one who walks not in the counsel of the wicked . . . but his delight is in the law of the Lord. . . ." (1:2). We may think of the law of the Lord, the will of God, and the teachings of Jesus as a burden that is wearisome to carry. That is human nature, too, but the benefits of the righteous life are not in pleasing a cranky God, but in experiencing the blessedness that comes from a life lived for Him.

The reward is in the doing or not doing of these things. In Psalm 19:7,8 we are told that the law of the Lord revives the soul, makes wise the simple, rejoices the heart, and enlightens the eyes. Living by the will of God is a joy, not a burden. Live this way and, no matter what comes, our lives will still be blessed.

If I told you that on your bookshelf behind some volumes there is a fortune of gold awaiting you, I think you'd probably take a look just to be sure. But something worth more than even the most precious gold is waiting to bless, not burden your life.

FARM FORUM

Editor:

I read with interest your editorial of May 4, regarding banks and beginning farmers.

I completely agree with your suggestion that bankers need to do as much as they possibly can to provide service and support to the entire field of agriculture, including young farmers. At MidAtlantic Farm Credit, we work very hard to provide financial services to all of agriculture, from small beginning farmers to large agribusinesses.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
May 24, 2002
Dairy Markets Weakening

- April milk up 2.9 percent.
- Dairy commodity inventory growing.
- Cool spring dampening ice cream demand.
- Fall futures prices down $1 per CWT.

Unlike last spring, there's plenty of milk to go around. In fact, there are enough milk trucks running down the interstate that butter prices are hitting new spring lows.

The market is experiencing a classic spring flush. The bigger questions are, will the milk supply begin to slow down with the summer heat, and will consumer demand be strong enough to push up fall milk prices?

Let's begin with the April milk production report.

April milk production for 20 select states last year fell 2 percent relative to the year before. The spring flush last year just did not materialize. Thus, an increase of 2.9 percent this April represents only a slight recovery relative to production in 2000.

The number that caught my eye was the growth in cow numbers. The number of milking cows on farms rose 8,000 head from March to April of this year. That is not a lot of cows and may just reflect a boost in spring calving. The concern, however, is that this trend will continue through the summer. That would mean farmers are expanding despite paying relatively high prices for dairy replacements.

Dairy commodity inventories are also on the rise. There is 1.05 billion pounds of nonfat dry milk in government warehouses. That is up 83 percent relative to a year ago. Anyway you look at it, we've got a powder problem. Clearly USDA will be forced to lower the support price of nonfat dry milk from current levels. There is so much product in government warehouses that USDA is offering to sell nonfat dry milk for manufacture into casein or caseinates. And the global market has made export opportunities nonexistent. The world price of nonfat dry milk continues to remain depressed at $0.57 per pound. That compares to our domestic price of $0.89-$0.90 per pound in Western markets.

Butter inventories at the end of April were up 76 percent relative to a year ago. There is a lot of cream out there and it's not finding its way into ice cream production yet. A cool spring is holding back consumer demand. Excess cream and no place to use it has sent butter prices plunging,

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY - week ending May 24. Receipts: Total - 309,700, last week 291,800. Auctions - 203,300, last week 220.100. Direct - 43,200, last week 71,700. Video/ Internet - 63,200, last week none. Old Format - 123,200, last week 152,800, last year 153,400. This week's auction volume included 54 percent over 600 lbs and 48 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers sold weak to 2.00 lower. High Plains auctions continue to have big sales with the Oklahoma National Stockyards selling over 60,000 head of feeder cattle in the past month alone. This is the fruition of just how light the wheat cattle contracting has been this spring. This week's receipts were mostly made up of heavy yearlings, except for the Southeast where trends were as much as 4.00 lower and the offerings were mostly plain quality old crop calves. Orders for lightweight cattle from east Texas across to Florida have slacked off over the past few weeks as most summer pastures have been stocked. However, moderate demand for grazing cattle remains in certain areas of the Midwest where rainfall has been plentiful. But, this demand is only for a few head here and there and is being satisfied by the light offerings in the local auction markets at slightly higher prices. Very few backgrounders are in the market for loads of Southeastern cattle this time of year.

The cornbelt continues to try and sow corn and soybeans amid wet conditions which returned late in the week, after a few days of reprieve. Further west, the dust continues to blow and the fear of fire on both the range and forest is overwhelming. The worst of the drought runs from the Texas Panhandle and New Mexico up through western Kansas and the cow-calf country of Colorado and Wyoming, where ranchers continue to sell off breeding stock. Salebarns in La Junta, Colorado are currently running twice their normal receipts with cow and calf pairs making up as much as half of the run. Montana has recently seen some much needed moisture but it will take months of relief to help conditions that have deteriorated over the past few years of drought. A moderate volume of finished steers and heifers sold 2.00-3.00 lower at mostly 64.00 on Tuesday.

This early-week trade was brought on by sharply lower futures and the fear of negative beef publicity that continues to plague our industry. However, the futures market rebounded later in the week and good beef consumption is expected for the Memorial Day holiday. Unfortunately, the densely populated areas of the Northeast are forecasting cool and damp weather for the long weekend which could curb backyard grilling.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.300-1.3832 Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.2688-1.3832 mostly 1.2688-1.2896.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9200-1.0250; Class III - spot prices - .7500-.9600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 109; last week - In 0, Out 80; last year - In 0, Out 194. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

Memorial Day weekend brought more milk than most contacts had seen for several years. Most manufacturing plants from North to South were full and a few had to turn away milk. Milk production continues to increase in parts of the Southeast and Middle Atlantic areas as temperatures have been relatively cool. In the Northeast, the milk flow is near peak levels, but the wet cool weather has delayed cows being turned out to pasture or fed green chop. Alfalfa and/or pasture grass has not grown as quickly as expected due to the long, cold spring. Normally, first cutting hay is "down" by Memorial Day weekend. This year, field crop plantings are behind schedule and farmers are getting that done before turning their attention to making hay. Bottled milk sales are sluggish throughout the region. More schools are now on summer break. Some Florida schools are still in session, but most Southeastern schools are done for the school year.

In the Northeast, schools have another 2-3 weeks before closing. Memorial Day marks the beginning of the "summer season" along the Eastern Shore. Bottled milk sales into that area did not show significant improvement prior to or during the holiday weekend. Florida handlers shipped nearly 200 loads out of state to manufacturing plants. This number is a significant jump from past weeks and may increase next week if trucks can be found to haul it north.

In the Northeast, manufacturing plants are also full. Contacts are reporting that the holiday weekend did cause a few problems, but everyone worked together and the milk got cleared. Some plants were still trying to get caught up at midweek, but this is typical for a post-holiday week.

The condensed skim market is little changed. Demand is slow to fair, but improved after the weekend as users who were down are back on line. Prices are steady. The fluid cream market is improved. Holiday volumes were heavy. Excess cream did clear to churns, but volumes were not quite as heavy as anticipated and not as much moved to Midwest churns. Demand from ice cream makers, cream cheese producers, and bottlers did improve early this week. Actually, suppliers have commented that cream was a little "snug" at midweek, but they did have late-week loads still looking for a home. Spot prices are about 7-8 cents lower as last week's CME average price fell nearly six cents. In light of the improved midweek buying interest, multiples did move higher at the low end of the range.

down to $1.03 per pound this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The good news is that butter imports have fallen behind year-ago levels. Lower domestic prices have reduced the demand for imports. But world butter prices are also weak, at $0.45 per pound. Butter prices will likely increase in the U.S., but only after summer heat increases the demand for ice cream and reduces butterfat production.

Cheese inventories are also higher than expected. Stocks of American cheese in April were up 1 percent relative to a year ago, whereas "other cheese" inventories were up 16 percent. Official numbers for commercial disappearance were not available this week from USDA, but there are many reports that consumer demand for mozzarella cheese is weak so far this year. That may explain why "other cheese" inventories are growing.

Cheese prices are weak but holding steady. Block cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange were $1.20 per pound, and barrel cheese prices rose to $1.17 per pound by week's end.

The futures market is expecting butter and cheese prices to rebound somewhat this summer and fall. The Class III futures at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (as of April 25, 2002) shows a low of $10.65 per CWT in June and a peak of $12.55 in September. The concern, however, is that September Class III milk futures were $13.50 per CWT about a month ago. The market is expecting some price weakness.

The weather and state of the general economy are two factors that will drive milk prices this summer and fall. It is still too early to see how either will play out this year. Dairy producers still have an opportunity to lock in fall futures prices that are above $12 per CWT. Right now, there is a b[illegible] that fall futures prices will continue to weaken over the next few months. I'll be wrong if cow numbers suddenly decline, global prices suddenly rise, and/or summer heat comes early.

Hempfield Area 4-H'er On Strawberry Winning Streak

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Heaping boxes of sweet strawberries grown by Lancaster County youth were available for purchase at the Rotary Club and 4-H Strawberry Roundup here Wednesday.

Jill Fletcher, a 7th grader in the Hempfield School District, raised the grand champion box of succulent 'Earliglo' fruit in the sideyard of her home on Spring Valley Road.

Tim Peters of Lancaster bought the prize berries for $270.

It was the second time in as many years that Fletcher exhibited champion strawberries at the annual roundup. Last year, she claimed top box in the first-time exhibitor division.

Fletcher said she "bunny-proofed" her strawberry plants by constructing a fence with a jagged edge around the perimeter of the patch. She also uses row covers to protect the berries.

Anticipating a treat, Tim Peters purchased this grand champion box of strawberries from Jill Fletcher at the annual Rotary Club and 4-H Strawberry Roundup.

Some of the berry money will go toward her college fund and the rest will be for spending, Fletcher said.

She has reaped the benefits of having several accomplished strawberry growers in the family. Older sister, Heather, and brother, Chris, have exhibited prize-winning berries in the past at the roundup. Jill's father is Dan Fletcher, and her mother, Michelle, serves as Mountville Community 4-H strawberry project leader.

Virginia Maness, Lititz, had champion entry in the first-year exhibitor category, Donald Peters purchasing her strawberries for $275.

Katie Theis of Mount Joy won reserve champion in the experienced exhibitor division, receiving $150 from Hess Catering.

Emily Stehman, Manheim, brought the reserve champion entry in the first-time division. Emanuel Peters purchased her berries for $85.

A total of 58 youth from various parts of Lancaster County participated in the roundup, including 21 just starting out with project books, according to 4-H coordinator Katina Showman.

Harold Keller of Mount Joy was auctioneer for the day.

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. Bill Heald grew up working on his grandfather's Chester County farm and went on to become a major force shaping the dairy business in Pennsylvania.

Heald's friends, family, and colleagues gathered here last week to honor him with a reception for his retirement from Penn State as professor of dairy science.

The West Grove native said he was 8 years old when he first climbed onto his grandfather's tractor and discovered his feet couldn't reach the clutch and brake pedals. Nevertheless, he knew he wanted a life in agriculture.

A passion for learning and dairy science took him to Penn State, the University of New Hampshire, and Virginia Tech, where he earned his doctorate in 1969. He engaged in various research projects and taught at Virginia Tech before returning to Penn State as professor in the early 1980s.

All the while, he remained involved in his family's dairy operation as "observer and casual adviser," he said. Their herd has expanded from 50 cows to more than 600 — and still growing — through three intergenerational transfers. This progressive dairy serves as an example of Heald's influence on farms across the state.

Among Heald's achievements was his role in starting the Dairy Stakeholders of Pennsylvania and the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania. Launched seven years ago, these organizations have been a strong force in promoting a more efficient and competitive dairy industry in the state.

Terry Etherton, Penn State dairy and animal science department head, said Heald demonstrates a creativity beyond the intelligence and persistence required for his position.

"He tends to think in a way that is very imaginative," Etherton said.

Much of Heald's extension work at Penn State focused on production records and computer-assisted information management, especially in the area of milk quality control. He helped discover a connection between somatic cell counts and milk production, developed the first Mastitis Expert system, and helped transform DHIA data management.

Heald has served as interim

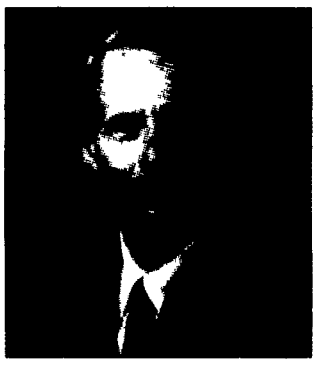
Farm Show Complex Construction Update

PDA Farm Show Complex



Hon. Samuel E. Hayes Jr.
Pa Secretary of Agriculture

Building For The Future – On Schedule

NEW CONSTRUCTION EXCITING FOR AGRICULTURE

There is something else that must also be done. That "something else" is a new roof for the existing Farm Show Complex.

While a new roof may not be "exciting," it is very important to protect the investment and to provide a facility for exhibitors without all of the leaks that have been with us too often for too many years.

There is more good news! Another $10 million has been gained for the Farm Show project to provide a new roof for the existing facility.

In terms of the new construction, it can be reported that there are two components that are "zooming" toward an August/September completion. They are the new Large Arena and the new Livestock Barn.

These new venues were part of the "Equine Center" which was contemplated for the PDA Farm that is located near the Department of Agriculture. For a host of very, very practical reasons, I decided it would be best to integrate a barn and a second large arena into the new construction at the Farm Show instead of pursuing a separate Equine Center.

The new Large Arena will be in addition to the current Large Arena, which means we will have two large arenas of world-class dimensions. The new arena will have a floor that measures approximately 300 feet long and 150 feet wide, a little bigger than our current Large Arena floor. There will be seating for 1,700 in the new large arena. Seating in the current Large Arena is approximately 8,000. When construction is completed, there will be two large arenas with a combined seating capacity approaching 10,000.

The new livestock barn will be adaptive for various agricultural events. But, as one example, it will have capacity for 140 horses. The new barn has been designed and positioned on-site in a manner so there can be an expansion of this livestock component in future years.

So "good news" continues at the construction site — $10 million to provide a new roof for the existing Farm Show Complex and the new arena and new barn are scheduled for early completion in August/September.

Other components of the new construction are still on schedule for November/December.

Ongoing construction at the Farm Show Complex was followed by a groundbreaking ceremony last week for the new PDA Livestock Evaluation Center, which is another Department of Agriculture construction project. Historic construction projects for agriculture — building for the future. That's the mission.

GOOD COMMUNICATION MAKES GOOD NEIGHBORS

Robert Frost once said, "Good fences make good neighbors." This famous saying may be true, but if you're a farmer in today's society, you'll want fewer fences and better communication with your neighbors.

The understanding of farming among our neighbors has been diminished significantly from what it was only a generation ago. Taking the first step in improving lines of communication can help ease misunderstandings and begin to strengthen your relationship. I offer a 21st Century view on this age-old quote: "Good communication makes good neighbors."

According to Mike Brubaker, Brubaker Farms, "The key in good neighbor relations is keeping open communication. Encourage your neighbors to come and talk to you about your farm operation."

Another farmer said, "It is important to inform your neighbors about what you do on your farm, but there is a fine line with how much information you share. Be sure to share information that can be understood at the non-farmer level so you do not develop any misunderstandings."

There are a number of things you can do to strengthen communications with your neighbors. It is advisable to include your township officials in whatever plan you develop.

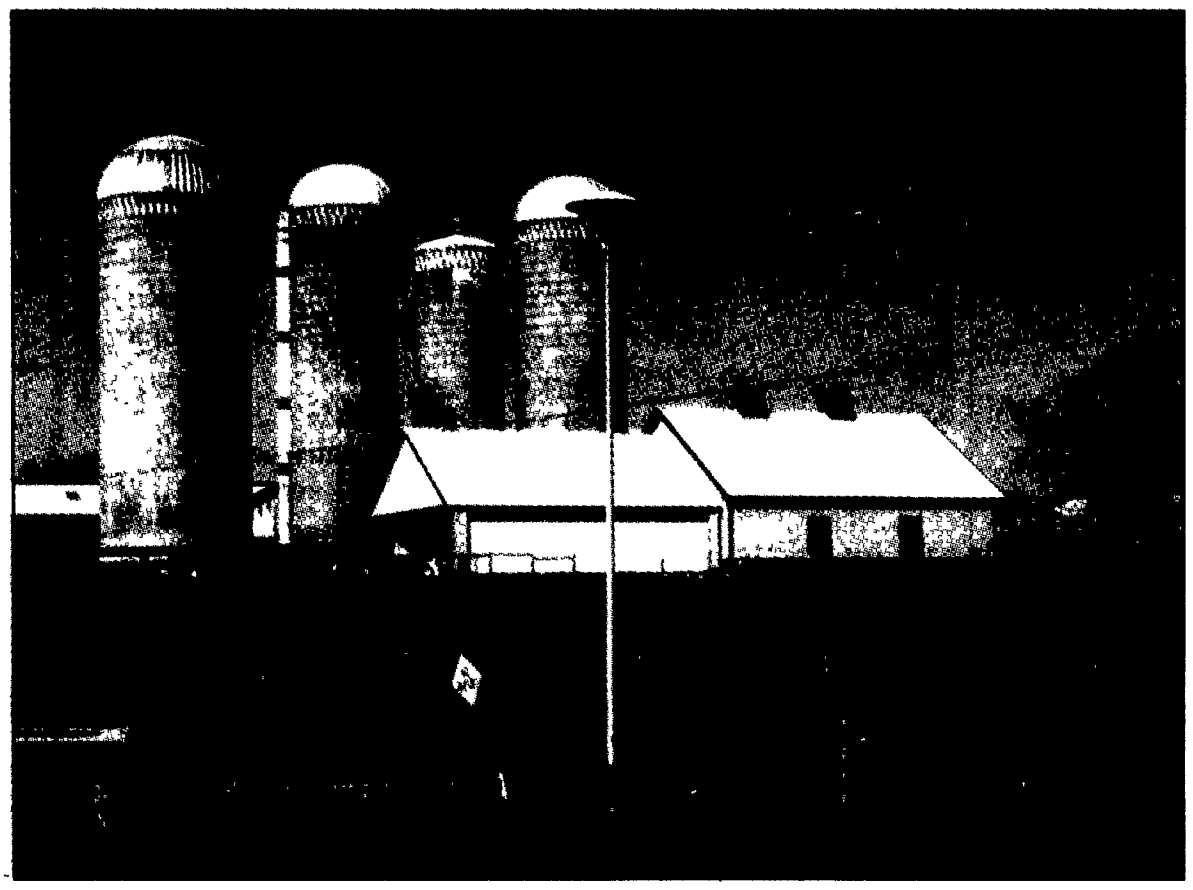
A simple idea is to hold a summer barbecue. Families love to come out to a farm and enjoy the many aspects of agriculture. Another idea is providing a hay wagon tour of the farm to explain the different features of your farm operation. When opening a new facility on your farm, you could hold an open house for the community.

You can even offer farm produce or products to your neighbors free of charge to allow them to enjoy products grown in their own community. In whatever activity you choose, it is important to point out that the food grown by farmers in the U.S. is the safest and most affordable in the world. The Lancaster Chamber can provide you with the "Lancaster Farming Facts" brochures, free of charge, which do an excellent job of listing the key aspects and benefits of our farming industry.

There are several possible outcomes to consider when analyzing your return in establishing a community education plan for your neighbors. You are developing a better understanding of your farm operations while at the same time highlighting the additional benefits of conservation and environmental practices your farm has applied, groundwater recharge that your open farmland provides, and the aesthetics of the open space in the community.

Another thing to consider would be a future expansion plan your farm may have, which could be jeopardized if neighbors had concerns. But by providing them a better understanding of your farm and your management practices and addressing any concerns today, you will help ease possible tensions in the future. You will receive a better peace of mind knowing your neighbors on a first-name basis and forming a relationship with them.

And beyond these possible benefits, you may develop some new friendships from your willingness to get to know your neighbors better.



Family Farm Days, an event sponsored by The Lancaster Chamber and Oregon Dairy, is an excellent opportunity to invite your neighbors to attend to give them an enjoyable perspective of a farm operation. This free event will be June 11-13 from 11 a.m.-7 p.m. at the Oregon Dairy Farm. Guests will enjoy a tractor ride tour of Oregon Dairy's modern dairy facility, ice cream and milk samples, informative booths with agricultural facts and product demonstrations, a watershed exhibit, chick hatching and sheep shearing displays, and a chicken barbecue dinner for only $3. Children's activities will include pony rides, a scavenger hunt, a hay tunnel, and much more. New to this year's event is The Lancaster County Conservation District's "Conservation Expo."

Livestock Evaluation Center Construction Under Way

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — A new livestock evaluation center of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will "provide the measuring stick for meat animal production" in the state, according to longtime Pennsylvania livestock breeder Clyde Brubaker.

Excavators were already at work here late last week as a groundbreaking team led by Sam Hayes, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, gathered on the site just east of the Ag Progress Days grounds to celebrate the new $6.5 million dollar center dedicated to improving beef, sheep, and swine production in Pennsylvania.

According to Hayes, construction is expected to be finished by November.

At 178,345 square feet, the center will be about 10 times larger than the present animal evaluation facility on the Penn State campus. It will provide housing space for 150 bulls, 300 rams, and 144 boars for performance testing. The center will also include classrooms for agricultural students, dormitory rooms, auction capability, and a conference room for industry meetings. Seating capacity will allow for 700 people.

Livestock breeders and researchers have been hoping for an expanded, updated facility for a number of years.

A nationally known breeder of Hampshire sheep, Brubaker said a major goal of the new center will be to develop marketable traits in livestock that help producers "do a better job meeting market demands."

Brubaker first got involved with sheep at the age of 3 when he wandered into his father's sheep pasture and was butted by a ewe nursing twins.

"What she was doing was protecting her assets," he said. "That's what we're doing in building this facility."

Hayes led the planning process for the center during the last several years, working closely with numerous livestock personnel from across the state to develop a facility that will be a leader in the nation.

"Continued improvement of our meat species, profitability for the livestock producer, and nutritious food for the consumer are reasons for the performance tests conducted at the livestock evaluation center," Hayes said.

Rate of gain, efficiency of feed conversion, and quality of prime cuts are some of the criteria that will be included in sire performance testing at the facility.

Hayes noted that the new grounds will provide comfortable, spacious housing and modern manure management for the cattle, hogs, and sheep.

"The new livestock evaluation center will satisfy the department of agriculture's goal to provide a better environment for the animals that more closely approximates the herd and flock management systems practiced by our livestock breeders," he said.

Guests at the groundbreaking ceremony included Robert Steel, Penn State dean of agriculture; John Enck, Pennsylvania director of animal health and diagnostic services; Eugene Klynoot, Christian Herr, and Russell Redding, deputy secretaries of agriculture; and numerous livestock stakeholders, including Samantha Beck and Margeaux Firestine, representing 4-H livestock programs; Jill Gevin, Pennsylvania lamb and wool princess, and Jeremy Ranck, representing the FFA.

The center is one of several major construction projects recently initiated by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, including this year's expansion of the Farm Show facilities, and a new greenhouse complex. Together, the projects cost more than $92 million.

GROWING YOUR BUSINESS NATURALLY

Every successful business, including farming, grows out of a love for making the products that come from that business, not out of a calculated plan to make money. Farmers who are successful chose something they love to do.

Dairy farmers choose dairying because they love cows. Vegetable farmers love to grow things. Crop farmers love working with machinery. It keeps them going through tight times and long hours.

These farmers also take great pride in creating high-quality products because they know in the long run that's what sells. Top-of-the-line products are more attractive, taste better, and keep the customer wanting more. Poor quality leaves a bad taste that spreads like wildfire. In other words, high quality sells. Increasingly, consumers look to local farmers to provide unique high-quality products they can't get from the big retailers.

Start small and grow naturally. Invest your ingenuity first, your labor second, and your money last. To lower your risk when beginning, borrow or get used machinery or equipment. Work for someone else until you decide what you want to grow and how to grow it.

Rent land until you learn how to develop markets, work out production practices, and learn about the peculiarities of the business. Once you have experience under your belt, you will be more likely to get a loan from your lender and be in a better position to survive downturns in the market or weather.

Base decisions on good records. If you keep good records on production costs, sales, and taxes, you will have sound information on which you can base your decisions, not on what you hope or guess it will be. Seek knowledgeable professional help if this is not your strong suit.

Adjust your production to the demand of your customers. To be successful you have to love what you do and produce what your customers want. Find out what are your customer's preferences, tastes, and motivations. Talk to your customers, give them samples, ask for feedback, and listen to their suggestions.

Identify your special niche, or place, in the market and focus on establishing a loyal, local customer base. Producing high-quality products and following the demands of your customers will help establish customer loyalty. Repeat customers are always easier to sell to than new customers.

Provide your customer with an experience. People buy directly from farmers because they want the experience as well as the product. Sharing some of the satisfactions and spiritual rewards of farm life adds to the value of your product in the customer's eyes.

Involve as many family members or partners in the farm business as you can. Each person's talents and abilities contribute to make the total farm operation larger than the sum of its parts. If family members aren't available or interested, take on partners that compliment your own abilities.

Stay informed. The only constant in life is change, and you will continually need to follow trends, get feedback from customers, stay on top of regulations, and know your competition to survive.

Finally, plan for the future. Just because you made a plan once, don't think you are finished. Success requires constant revision, renewal, and reinvention.

To learn more about growing a farm business, come to the Farmers Market and CSA Sales workshop scheduled June 19 at 7 p.m. in Greensburg. Call Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 to register for this free event and to obtain more information.

Pennsylvania Cornfields Damaged By Late May Frosts

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Many areas of Pennsylvania experienced late frosts in the last week, resulting in damage to acres of corn in central Pennsylvania. An agronomist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said farmers should know the factors affecting frost damage.

Gregory Roth, associate professor of agronomy in Penn State's crop and soil sciences department, explains that good planting conditions and warm weather in late April resulted in rapid emergence and development for many of the earliest planted fields. Some fields had corn with two to three fully developed leaves.

"When the frost hit, many of these early-planted fields were hit," Roth said. "Corn fields that were full of growing small plants last week now appear to be very sick. Producers are wondering how this will affect their crop and if they need to replant.

"The severity of the damage varied depending on the location and the size of the corn. Generally, drier, tilled fields or low-lying fields are most at risk, but even the absence of those factors did not save some fields from damage. In some locations, where the temperature was below 28 degrees for more than several hours, plants may have experienced a lethal dose of frost damage and the young plants may not recover. For instance, low temperatures of 27 and 29 were reported for Huntingdon and Altoona, respectively, on the morning of May 20, with lower temperatures likely in outlying areas."

Roth said the key to assessing the effects of the frost damage is to be patient and wait for several days to see if the plants are showing signs of recovery. Usually after two to three days of 70-degree temperatures, new growth will be initiated and be visible in the plant's whorl (the base of the plant where the leaves originate). Under cool conditions, it may take a few more days to see recovery.

"Frost damage most often results in the death of aboveground plant parts," he said. "Frost-damaged leaves will blacken and turn straw-colored in a few days. The growing point of the plant is located deep inside the whorl and is below the soil surface until the plant has about five fully emerged leaves. Usually small corn will recover quickly from frost damage and in two weeks will show little sign of injury. In this episode, because of the severity and multiple frost events, I am concerned that the frost injury may be more severe than usual."

If all the plants don't recover, Roth said producers should assess the population of plants and decide whether the fields need to be replanted. Guidelines for replanting can be found in the corn production section of the Penn State Agronomy Guide, which can be found on the Web at http://agguide.agronomy.psu.edu/CM/Sec4toc.html. The 2002 edition of the guide is available for $9.

April Milk Production Up 0.9 Percent In Pa.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk production in Pennsylvania during April 2002 totaled 920 million pounds, up 0.9 percent from last year's production, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

The number of milk cows in the state during the month averaged 581,000 head, unchanged from March and down 18,000 from April 2001.

Production per cow averaged 1,600 pounds in April, 30 pounds less than in March but 60 pounds more than April 2001.

In the 20 states surveyed, milk production during April totaled 12.5 billion pounds, up 2.9 percent from production in these same states during April 2001. March revised production, at 12.8 billion pounds was up 3.1 percent from March 2001.

Production per cow in the 20 major states averaged 1,614 pounds for April, 43 pounds above April 2001. The number of milk cows on farms in the 20 major states averaged 7.75 million head, 12,000 head more than April 2001, and 8,000 head more than in March of 2002.

Producer Websites Upcoming

OMAHA, Neb. — Angus Productions Inc. (API) will provide online coverage of the 2002 Beef Improvement Federation (BIF) Annual Meeting.

Producers can go to www.bifconference.com for information, articles, news releases and links related to the conference as it happens. This year's BIF conference will take place July 10-13 in Omaha, Neb., and will focus on beef cattle efficiency.

The Web site will include a schedule of events, biographies of speakers and tour hosts, symposium papers, award winners, tour and conference highlights and links to the registration information as well as links to other related sites.

Angie Denton, API director of Web marketing, said, "this first-time online BIF coverage, along with the beef efficiency site, will provide producers from across the country information they need to enhance efficiency and profitability."

In addition to providing coverage of the BIF conference, there will also be a site dedicated to beef cow efficiency. The API editorial and Web marketing teams will compile information and articles to post to the site, www.beefcowefficiency.com. The site will also include links that can potentially increase efficiency and profitability for the producer.

Both sites are scheduled to go live June 1.

REDUCING HEAT STRESS IN DAIRY CATTLE — PART TWO

Extension Dairy Agent
Lancaster

Earlier articles focused on how heat stress affects cattle, and the use of shade and exhaust fans to help protect cows from heat stress. This article focuses on the use of circulation fans evaporative cooling and some other ideas for protecting cattle from heat stress.

Circulation fans can be installed over bunk areas and over rows of stalls. This method does not exchange air as effectively as exhaust fans, but it does take advantage of some natural ventilation, and the barn is still ventilated if the fans should fail.

How many fans are needed? One fan will "service" a distance of about 10 times its diameter. In other words, four feet. Fans should be spaced about 40 feet apart (about 10 stalls) and angled downward toward the stalls.

Evaporative cooling can help lower air temperatures when the humidity is low enough for evaporation to occur. Otherwise, it can raise humidity levels and cause animal discomfort. The idea is to introduce a very fine mist into the air stream, or to draw air through an evaporation pad or a radiator-like heat exchanger to cool the incoming air.

Another method is to wet the cow and use fans to evaporate moisture from her body (the same effect you feel when get out of the water and stand in a breeze). Cows can be sprinkled at the feed bunk, with a low-pressure nozzle that delivers about 0.5 gallons of water per minute as coarse droplets for 3-5 minutes at about 15-minute intervals. The idea is to soak cows to the hide while they are at the bunk and cool them off in the breeze of the fans when they return to the stall area to rest.

Other helpful ideas include:

- Minimize the time cows stand in holding areas.
- Do not crowd cows. Give them plenty of bunk space and watering space.
- Minimize their exertion and excitement. Don't make them walk great distances to feed and water, and keep them quiet before and after breeding and at calving time.

Feeds dry out faster with increased air movement and spoil more quickly when temperatures rise. These problems can be minimized by mixing feeds more frequently to help keep them fresher, by feeding more frequently, by keeping mangers and watering devices clean, and by increasing the moisture content of the ration.

Feed cows a more nutrient-dense ration, while also being sure to meet their fiber requirements. Increase mineral intakes to replenish what cows lost because of increased sweating, slobbering, and urination. Feeding more buffers, niacin, and products such as aspergillus oryzae may also be helpful. In all these matters, observe cows closely and work closely with your nutritionist and veterinarian.

The Dairy Farm Business Summary: What Is It And What Can It Do For You?

Sarah Roth
Penn State Dairy Alliance

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co) — What is the Dairy Farm Business Summary?

The Dairy Farm Business Summary (DFBS) is an analytical program designed to allow producers to improve accounting and financial analysis techniques, develop managerial skills, and solve business and financial management problems.

This is accomplished through gathering the information necessary to complete the analysis and then comparing their farm's performance with top performing businesses in Pennsylvania and the Northeast. The information required to complete the DFBS includes: Cash receipts and expenses, accounts payable and receivable, beginning and year-end balance sheets, land resources and use, depreciation information, feed and supply inventory, livestock inventory, and machinery and equipment inventory.

How can the DFBS help you?

The Dairy Farm Business Summary provides an excellent opportunity to work with a computer-based program that will assist in better data utilization and interpretation, increasing the soundness of management decisions. After completing the required input information, a comprehensive report is generated which includes: profitability, liquidity, solvency, labor and capital efficiency, and dairy and cropping enterprise analyses.

From the report, producers can answer the following questions: What are the effects of key expenses, production levels, and price risk on the profitability of the farm business? Is production being maximized while controlling expenses? Does the business generate adequate returns to the resources allocated to it? Are accounts payable and debt payments creating a cash flow burden?

The greatest benefit is having the ability to see what actual business and production costs are, thus allowing for tighter cost control and better management decisions, and achieving greater control over the finances of the dairy business.

In addition, producers have access to standardized benchmarks for dairy businesses throughout Pennsylvania and the Northeast. By participating in the DFBS programs, producers' data will be entered into the Top Dairies database. This allows the producer to benchmark their farm's performance against the performance of dairy businesses across the country.

Top Dairies also allows the producer to specify the types and sizes of farms he or she would like to benchmark against, making the information all the more valuable to the producer.

Dairy advisors and extension agents also benefit from the program. Special reports can be generated for a group of clients, county(s), or regions — provided that data for the minimum number of farms are available.

Completing the DFBS can be an educational experience and provides a launch pad for discussion within groups of producers who meet regularly or those who wish to form a group. Without sharing sensitive information, important issues such as efficiency and specialization and their effect on profitability can be discussed.

How can you participate?

Report To Guide Childhood Ag Injury Prevention Efforts

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Would you take your child to work at a mine or construction site?

Of course not. Yet children routinely are exposed to dangerous situations in production agriculture, where the line between home and worksite has traditionally been blurred.

A report designed to guide national childhood agricultural injury prevention efforts has been published by the National Children's Center for Rural and Agricultural Health and Safety.

"We hope this report inspires and motivates people to meet the challenge of protecting the nearly two million children who live, visit and work on our nation's farms and ranches," said Barbara Lee, Ph.D., director of the National Children's Center, Marshfield Clinic, Marshfield, Wis.

The report is an outgrowth of the 2001 Summit on Childhood Agricultural Injury Prevention, a federally-funded initiative that brought together nearly 100 farmers, growers, professors, physicians, adolescents, and safety professionals, along with representatives of agricultural organizations and federal agencies. These attendees used consensus development to generate injury prevention strategies and priorities for the future.

The need for the summit report is underscored by the more than 100 deaths and about 33,000 restricted-activity injuries that occur to youth on farms each year, Lee said.

Goals and recommendations include:

- Adults will ensure that young children and nonworking youth can grow, play, learn, and rest in protective environments that are free of agricultural hazards.
- Young workers will receive agricultural safety training, guidance, personal protective equipment, and adult supervision based on child development principals.
- A strong public/private infrastructure will be maintained to ensure the vision, leadership, and national commitment necessary to prevent childhood agricultural injuries.

The summit report can be viewed and downloaded in .pdf format by going to http://research.marshfieldclinic.org/children.

Printed copies are available by contacting the National Children's Center for Rural and Agricultural Health and Safety at (888) 924-7233 or (715) 389-4999, or by e-mailing nccrahs@mfldclin.edu.

Soggy Fields May Promote Diseases

WOOSTER, Ohio — Excessive wet weather throughout Ohio the past several weeks may cause problems with disease development in the state's wheat crop.

Pat Lipps, an Ohio State University Extension plant pathologist with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, said that growers should be scouting their fields for such diseases as powdery mildew, Stagonospora leaf blotch and head scab.

"Stagonospora leaf blotch is being favored by frequent rain showers. We are not seeing too much of it yet because its been a bit too cool, but we are setting the stage for some major problems with continued rain," said Lipps. "The other disease is head scab and the rains have provided saturated conditions for this fungus to produce spores on old corn residue. Whenever there are high levels of the fungus in the field, there is always the possibility of having head scab in the wheat if it's in close proximity to the corn residue."

Lipps said powdery mildew, which was noticed earlier in the season, is beginning to advance in some fields and a return to warmer weather will favor its continued spread.

"Scouting is probably the first thing growers should do right now. Over the next week, we'll probably start seeing some Stagonospora develop on the upper leaves of the plant," said Lipps. "About two weeks after heading, growers should check their fields again because that's when head scab will probably be seen."

Wheat growth has been variable throughout the state. The crop in southern counties is in full bloom. Throughout central Ohio, wheat heads are beginning to emerge and in northern Ohio, the crop is currently at the boot stage with head emergence likely to begin at any time. The crop throughout the extreme northwest corner of the state is the least developed, ranging anywhere from flag leaf emergence to the boot stage.

"The crop normally goes into head in Ohio right before Memorial Day weekend. This year we are a little bit ahead of that schedule," said Lipps. "What we'd like to see is the wheat head out as soon as possible and then have a cool period through the flowering and grain filling time. This would provide us with extra days of grain filling which we can take advantage of and is essential to adding more bushels to the yield."

In addition to disease development, Lipps said saturated soils have produced some nitrogen deficiency in the crop. "We are starting to see some yellow areas in the fields," he said. "Wheat rapidly takes up nitrogen between jointing and head emergence and this is the period when we were getting all the rain."

Unseasonably cool temperatures are also hitting the wheat crop. Those plants with newly emerged heads are most vulnerable to freezing injury when temperatures drop below 30 degrees Fahrenheit.

Lipps said signs of freezing injury — damaged florets and shriveled tissue — can be seen several days after damage has occurred. "Yield loss will be minimal if only the top florets of the head are injured. Otherwise, if entire heads are affected, the loss may be proportional to the number of heads killed," he said.

Lipps added that a forecasted rise in temperatures should rapidly advance wheat growth throughout the state.

How big is big?

Wal-Mart becomes the largest company, according to Forbes Magazine. With about $220 billion in sales, this should place them above the country of Austria on the economic ladder. They are already the largest retailer of food in the U.S., and growing, having recently invested a significant sum in Japan. The question remains: who will determine our food sources and their availability in the future?

It has been predicted that within 3-5 years, just four companies will control 50 percent of all the food retailed in the world: one in North America, two in Europe, and one in Asia. How's that for market clout? What will your role as a producer be?

Penn State Says New Farm Bill Aids Commonwealth's Dairy Farmers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A dairy economist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says he expects the newly signed federal farm bill to be "generous" to Pennsylvania's small dairy farmers.

The new Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 includes a new dairy program called the "National Dairy Market Loss" program. According to Ken Bailey, associate professor of dairy markets and policy, the new program offers help for small dairy farmers who have to cope with volatile milk prices by providing direct federal payments whenever the fluid price of milk in Boston falls below $16.94 per hundred pounds (CWT).

Bailey says the program will cover about 88 percent of the milk produced in Pennsylvania. "Pennsylvania is unique in that we have about 10,000 dairy farms in the state," he says. "Most Pennsylvania farms have fewer than 100 cows, and that's just the kind of farm operations that Congress intended to support with this program. Unlike many western states, we can expect the bulk of our Pennsylvania dairy producers to receive counter-cyclical payments on all of their annual milk sales."

The National Dairy Market Loss program works by making a direct payment to farmers in any month when the Class I price of milk in Boston falls below $16.94. The payment rate is equal to 45 percent of the difference between $16.94 and the Boston Class I price.

Bailey estimates that the payment rate under the counter-cyclical program will average 97 cents per CWT for the period from December 2001 to September 2002. "The dairy markets have been weak in recent weeks due to sluggish demand and growth in the milk supply;" says Bailey. "That will result in fairly large payment rates under this new program." His analysis indicates that the Boston Class I price was above $16.94 just 28 percent of the time during the 60-month period from January 1997 to December 2001.

"The program is retroactive back to December 2001," Bailey says. "Thus, most Pennsylvania dairy producers can expect to receive a fairly substantial check from USDA some time this summer or early fall. This check, which is for the transition period from December 2001 until they get the program running, will be a one-time payment. Thereafter, payments will be computed monthly and will be received by dairy producers no later than 60 days from the previous month."

Payments are limited to the first 2.4 million pounds of milk from a single "dairy operation" in a given federal fiscal year (which ends Sept. 30). That is equivalent to the amount of milk from a 133-cow dairy operation producing 18,000 pounds of milk per cow.

The amount of money a single dairy operation can expect for the first fiscal year will depend on the level of milk prices between now and September, and on the amount of milk each farm produces and is eligible for under the program. Bailey estimated that a farm with 50 cows producing an average of 15,000 pounds of milk per cow per year should receive $6,000. A farm with 80 cows and 15,000 pounds of milk production per cow will receive $9,700.

The program payments for the first fiscal year will not exceed $23,300 for a farm with 150 cows each producing 20,000 pounds of milk per year. These numbers assume that USDA will allow the full 2.4 million pounds of milk to qualify for program payments over the 10-month period from December 2001 to September 2002.

Pennsylvania dairy farmers will receive instructions from USDA in the next month or so to sign up for the program at their local Farm Service Agency office. They also will receive the regulations that spell out exactly how much milk will qualify for the program. The sign-up period should begin no earlier than July 13, 2002. The counter-cyclical payment program is expected to end Sept. 30, 2005. USDA is still writing the regulations that will determine the definition of a "dairy operation."

"The question is, how will USDA interpret the 2.4 million pound limit for each fiscal year," Bailey says. "Will a Pennsylvania dairy farm with a husband, wife and 266 cows qualify for 2.4 million pounds of milk per farm partner for a total of 4.8 million pounds? Or, will the entire operation qualify for no more than 2.4 million pounds?"

The National Dairy Market Loss program is part of an overall farm bill that includes an extension of the dairy price support program and the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP), a Johne's disease control program, and increased funding for dairy and other livestock producers under the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP).

Bailey warns that Pennsylvania dairy farmers should consider this program as temporary. "We should take these payments and focus on making our farms more competitive over the next three years," he says. "That way, if the program ends, we'll be better positioned for the future."

'New Jersey And You' At National Convention

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

RINGOES, N.J. — The New Jersey Holstein-Friesian Association (NJH-FA) will host the National Holstein Convention in Atlantic City June 23-27 at the Taj Mahal Hotel and Casino.

"We're at full steam in all of our efforts and things are going very well for us," said national convention chairman Joe Valen, Somerset, N.J.

Valen provided updates from all planning committee activities late in January this year at the NJH-FA meeting attended by more than 50 members, families, and friends at the Amwell Valley Fire House in Ringoes, N.J.

Said Valen, "The National Holstein Convention will provide a unique opportunity for agribusiness representatives to gather with Holstein breeders from around the country in Atlantic City. More than 3,000 are expected to attend this exciting event."

The host association has picked the theme, "New Jersey and You in 2002," adopted from the state's popular tourist slogan, to emphasize the importance of N.J. to the U.S. food-producing industry.

At the NJH-FA meeting in January, buttons advertising the "N.J. and You" slogan, featuring a bovine beach-goer, showcases New Jersey agriculture, noted Valen, not just the Holstein association.

The national association will also include a meeting of the junior association with host chairperson Melanie Richman, Salem County.

Richman's 14 committee members were putting the final touches on plans for a wide variety of activities with juniors from around the U.S. in Atlantic City.

Richman said that about 300 youth from across the country will gather and participate in a wide array of activities, including Dairy Jeopardy, speech contest, Dairy Bowl, beach party (including games such as a relay, kite building, sand castle building, etc.), in addition to dance, a Great Adventure Safari Tour, a tour of the host picnic farm, Cedar Lane, Cowtown Rodeo, a national junior meeting, and luncheon. For the first time, junior members can also participate in senior meeting and show events in Atlantic City.

According to tours chair Richard Norz Jr., different tours are scheduled. Recreational ones include:

• Statue of Liberty/Ellis Island.

• Vegetable producers, including Shepherd Farms and others, along with the host association barbecue at Cedar Lane, Oldwick, N.J.

Spouse's program events include a bus trip to Cape May with lunch at the Lafayette Hotel and a walk to popular shopping areas.

According to Valen, a "dairy bar" will be established with various dairy and New Jersey-vegetable related products, including ice cream, milk, grapes, cheese, and others. Valen said volunteers are needed to staff the dairy bar and contributions from dealers and processors are urgently needed. Valen asked members to write down the dealers and processors they know, "whoever you do business with, and get me that information." Valen can be reached at (732) 568-0219.

Richard Byma, president of the NJH-FA, Sussex, N.J., spoke about plans for the national sale, which will include 75 entries and 40 for the silent auction.

"We are trying to showcase all of New Jersey," said Valen, who noted there is "so much more to New Jersey than Atlantic City."

Planning for the convention began seven years ago. The Taj Mahal can just to fit the large convention, he noted. About 55 booths were sold, and booth space was officially sold out. Lancaster Farming plans to exhibit at and report extensively about the convention.

Sponsorships include various levels, such as Diamond, $40,000 and up; Gold, $10,000 and up; Silver, $5,000 and more; Bronze, $2,500 and more; and donors, at least $1,000.

Special technical sessions at the convention were scheduled to include the effects of nutrients on reproduction and embryo transfer, vaccines to help treat Johne's, and others.

Recognized with awards for juniors will be the champion Dairy Bowl team (last year they received $205,000 in scholarship money). At the senior level, the Outstanding Distinguished Young Breeder Award, for farm managers/owners under 40 years old, will be presented. Also, a premier breeder family will be rewarded for herd genetic accomplishments.

At last year's convention in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, about 300 visitors to the NJF-HA booth in the trade show enjoyed the theme, "Some of New Jersey's Finest," noted Valen. Last year's sale included about 1,500 people. The sale this year is scheduled Wednesday evening at the convention. A banquet will conclude the convention Thursday.

New Jersey has been noted as the "cradle" of the dairy industry. Brown Swiss were first bred in the garden state, as well as the Guernsey and Jersey.

Jersey cattle were brought into the ports, and the state was the Jersey cattle leader for many years. Valen said artificial breeding began in the 1940s in the state, with the New Jersey Cooperative Artificial Breeding Association.

Scheduled is a reception with National Holstein President Joann Hartman, Waterloo, Ill. General sessions will be conducted midweek, with the luncheon and banquet at the end of the week. The Outstanding Young Farmer Award will be presented at the general session Thursday. The banquet will be a "wrap-up" event, a chance to renew friendships.

The convention will provide attendees from around the country with message that New Jersey is "alive, vibrant, an exciting place with a healthy ag industry," said Valen, "and a fun place to visit."

The association still needs volunteers to sign up in almost every facet of the convention schedule.

But Valen assured members at the meeting in January that "you are going to be really pleased from a financial standpoint that we did this," he said.

Penn State Awarded National Security Program Grant

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will receive one of just six institutional grants to be awarded by the National Security Education Program (NSEP).

The U.S. Department of Defense will provide $421,873 over four years to the Russian and Ukrainian Programs for Future Agricultural Leaders, which will support development of Russian and Ukrainian language and culture courses designed for agricultural students in preparation for study and work opportunities in those countries.

Of the six grants, Penn State's is one of just two that are for the four-year NSEP maximum award. Tom Bruening, associate professor and coordinator of the college's programs in Russia and Ukraine, believes that's because of the novel use of technology and involvement by other universities.

"Penn State actually is playing the leadership role in a consortium of universities," he said. "In the Russian Studies program, Montana State, the universities of Nebraska, Maryland and Florida, and Texas A&M are involved. In the Ukrainian Studies program, Iowa State, Ohio State, the University of Minnesota and Alabama A&M are partner universities."

Language and cultural courses taught by Penn State professors will be offered over the Internet starting this summer through collaborative efforts between the College of Agricultural Sciences and the department of Germanic and Slavic languages in the College of Liberal Arts. The cultures courses will have major agricultural components.

"We are confident that this year's awardees represent cutting-edge international education initiatives that will have a significant impact on the personal and professional development of the participants," the NSEP news release announcing the awards states.

"(They) will also help the U.S. higher education institutions insure our national security interests through increased understanding of regions, languages and cultures that are distinct from our own."

The grant, according to Deanna Behring, director of the college's international programs, will give agriculture students the opportunity to better understand foreign languages and cultures. "Our future leaders will be better prepared to deal with global pressures related to agriculture, such as food security for a growing population, pressures on natural resources, rural incomes, poverty and international trade," she said. "These factors can lead to civil conflict and present unique and growing national security concerns for the 21st century."

Behring believes that by giving students language skills, cultural understanding and experiences in the former Soviet states, the program will yield a cadre of future leaders who can help develop growing markets for U.S. agricultural products.

"Students participating in this program will be those who will likely deflect trade and other disputes related to agriculture and food security," she said, "as well as help develop farm incomes and improve health status in rural areas, contributing to stable Russian and Ukrainian societies."

Other institutions receiving NSEP grants were the University of California at Berkeley, Indiana University, the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Monterey Institute of International Studies and the University of Pittsburgh.

The NSEP was created in 1991 by the National Security Education Act. The goals of the program are to educate U.S. citizens to understand foreign languages and cultures, strengthen U.S. economic competitiveness and enhance international cooperation and security.

Survey Says Global Warming Real

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Global warming is real, according to the results of a BusinessWeek online reader's survey.

When asked "Do you think that global warming is starting to occur?" two-thirds of the 1,775 respondents said yes.

An almost identical number thinks that global warming would pose a danger to human life. More than half of those who replied agreed that humans have the ability to slow global warming, would be willing to make significant changes to the lifestyle to try to defend global warming, and would like President Bush to reconsider his opposition to the 1997 Kyoto agreement that is aimed at curbing greenhouse gas emissions.

The complete survey results are available at http://www.businessweek.com/bwdaily/dnflash/mar2002/nf20020328_2783.htm.

In fact, we regularly analyze our portfolio and the geographic area we serve to ensure that we are supporting all the members of our industry. Last year, we completed an entire report for the Farm Credit Administration on usage by young, beginning, and small farmers. As of December 2001, 21.6 percent of our almost 9,000 borrowers were 35-years-old or younger. Beginning farmers (or those who have been farming less than 10 years) comprised almost 25 percent of our portfolio.

We readily admit that commercial banks have more debt outstanding to agriculture than does the Farm Credit System. In fact, they have always had more, because of the simple fact that there are far more commercial banks than there are Farm Credit institutions. In mid-2001, more than 8,000 commercial banks nationally reported that they made an agricultural loan. Today, fewer than 120 Farm Credit direct lending institutions compete with those banks.

That said, I don't disagree with your point. The Farm Credit system was developed to provide a reliable source of credit to agriculture. We continue that mission today by working to ensure that there are no barriers to any of our borrowing groups — including the young and beginning farmer group.

Mid-Atlantic spends a lot of time helping young farmers understand their credit options. I invite you to join us on June 11 at the Eisenhower Auditorium at Penn State to see us present monetary awards to the top FFA record-keepers in the state. Later this month, feel free to come to Shippensburg University, where 16 students from our region will also be given awards at the MAC (MidAtlantic Alliance of Cooperatives) Summer Institute, a youth education program.

MidAtlantic supports MAC with $10,000 in dues each year. In addition to our financial support, we also donate a lot of time to help young farmers. I am proud to say our account executives spend hundreds of hours each year speaking to groups of young and beginning farmers, either through school programs or through continuing education workshops throughout the community.

We have been very active with the Pennsylvania Farm Link program, which helps young farmers link with retiring farmers, to help them get started in the industry. In fact, I have a lengthy list of activities in our business plan targeted to just this segment of our marketplace, and would be happy to share this list to show our commitment to young and beginning farmers.

The Farm Credit Association has made it a priority to better monitor the service given to this vulnerable, important group. We agree that that's a great idea. After all, their future success is integral to our success, not to mention the success of the entire industry.

Senate Bill 1413, which protects farmers' rights, is under consideration by the House of Representatives. Originally, the bill was introduced to the Pennsylvania State Senate by Sen. Roger A. Madigan (R-Bradford). Due to its significance in the agricultural community, the legislation is expected to receive swift action from our elected officials in Harrisburg.

In a nutshell, SB 1413 is crafted to protect and provide opportunities and growth to the state's number one industry — agriculture. Many times opportunity in the farming industry is limited or prohibited by local governments, often at the urging of rural residents who have discriminated against a particular agricultural business.

SB 1413 would prohibit municipalities from passing ordinances and implementing policies that are inconsistent with the Right to Farm Law. Agricultural operations would also be protected from nuisance suits. If passed, the law may entitle farmers to recover legal fees and court costs associated with a successful legal challenge against unlawful ordinances.

Isn't it ironic that many Pennsylvanians cry for more employment opportunities within our state and at the same time, some of those very same individuals want to stifle potential growth by the state's number one industry?

The Pennsylvania State Grange, an organization that represents 25,000 rural Pennsylvanians, urges the agricultural community and its friends to rally the support of their local representatives for the passage of SB 1413. Help keep the agricultural industry growing for the future.

Brenda Shambaugh
Legislative Director
Pennsylvania State Grange

Editor:

The Pennsylvania Ground Water Association has strongly supported HB 1591 that passed in the House of Representatives in November 2001. This legislation (called the Water Well Construction Act) is in the Pennsylvania Senate, and may become law in this legislative session.

This is sad to say, but Pennsylvania is one of only four states that do not have residential water well construction standards, and we need standards now more than ever. Let's look at several reasons why we need standards:

- More than one-third of Pennsylvania's population depends upon groundwater for its drinking water supplies. More than 2.5 million Pennsylvania residents in 978,202 households are served by privately-owned water wells. A whole lot of people are using privately owned wells and the quality of their groundwater needs to be protected.
- More than 20,000 new water wells are drilled in Pennsylvania each year, and so the opportunity for new, improperly constructed wells to contaminate our aquifers is significant. If the current drought continues, the number of new wells may increase because of the need for deeper replacement wells. Our use of groundwater is growing.
- There are many documented cases of where one improperly constructed (no grout and not enough casing) well became the conduit for contamination to flow to and contaminate neighboring wells. Following new construction standards would protect the owner's water quality and that of neighboring wells and local aquifers.
- The US Geological Survey conducted a study in southeastern Pennsylvania and found that E. coli fecal coliform bacteria were more likely to be found in water from ungrouted wells. No one who understands how grout and sanitary well construction features protect our aquifers was surprised by the findings of this research.
- Water quality testing of residential wells in some areas of Pennsylvania has found that more than 50 percent of the well water samples contain coliform bacteria contamination. This contamination was not from existing regional aquifer pollution, but from local contamination because of the absence of grout and other sanitary features on household wells.

Our government sets highway speed limits and driving rules to apply to everyone, because if there weren't speed limits and rules of the road, someone would speed or drive where they wanted and kill several of us by their bad judgment. Similarly, we need uniform well construction rules to protect our health and our aquifers.

You need to know that the new residential water well construction standards will be developed by the Water Well Construction Advisory Committee that will contain groundwater professionals, including four water well contractors. You will have a say in the new standards. The costs of meeting the new standards are expected to add only 10 to 25 percent to the total cost of a residential well system, so the fears of doubling or tripling the cost of a new well are wrong.

Also, with uniform standards statewide, drilling contractors will be on a "level playing field" when bidding on residential well work. Contractors know that it's very frustrating to lose a residential well job to a lower bid when that bid is lower because it cuts corners and does not contain necessary features in the well system.

We all recognize that few homeowners really understand all the features necessary for a quality water well system. They may pick the low bid, not realizing what their system is missing and how the missing parts are important to the quality of their well water (and the quality of their neighbors' well water).

Please don't just say "we don't need more government regulations" until you think through this issue, and realize that public health protection standards have to come through the "government" to be uniform and effective.

Va. Provides Avian Influenza Update

RICHMOND, Va. — Officials with the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (VDACS) continue to test for avian influenza in an effort to contain the spread of the disease. The latest figures posted for May 28-31 follow.

No. of farms affected: 178; no. of farms quarantined: 172; no. of farms depopulated: 176; types of farms affected: turkey breeders, 26; commercial turkeys (meat birds), 116; broilers (chickens), 10; broiler-breeders (chickens), 25; and layers (chickens) 1.

Birds depopulated to date: 4,322,809; quarantined farms not yet depopulated: 2; birds in quarantine waiting for depopulation: 22,600; counties affected: Rockingham, 130 cases; Shenandoah, 16 cases; Augusta, 19 cases; Page, 11 cases; Greene, 1 case; and Highland, 1 case.

VDACS has implemented mandatory preslaughter testing on all breeder birds, commercial turkeys, and broilers as well as mandatory testing of any flocks with respiratory symptoms. If a flock tests positive, officials will quarantine the farm immediately and order the destruction of the flock within 24 hours.

The poultry company is responsible for depopulation. Disposal may be by one of three methods: on-farm burial or composting with a DEQ permit, incineration, or movement of carcasses in sealed, leakproof containers to a sanitary landfill.

Gov. Schweiker Proclaims June Dairy Month

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In celebration of National Dairy Month, Gov. Mark Schweiker has proclaimed June as Dairy Month in Pennsylvania to recognize the significant economic benefits that our dairy farm families and the many agribusinesses make to the state.

"Pennsylvania is proud of its dairy industry and very appreciative of the many benefits to our rural communities throughout the commonwealth," said Schweiker.

Pennsylvania's dairy industry is the state's leading agricultural segment, contributing nearly 40 percent of all agricultural income and generating more than $1.52 billion in revenues. More than 17,000 people are employed on Pennsylvania dairy farms and another 12,000 in dairy processing.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture supports the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders and the Business Plan Development Program. This effort is assisting dairy farm families develop business plans that will help their farms continue their leading economic role.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has developed an advertising and promotion strategy for their dairy products and the "got milk?" slogan. Through their efforts and the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program, Pennsylvania dairy products are well recognized for quality in Pennsylvania and around the world. And Pennsylvania is known for its excellent dairy genetics.

"We salute the strength and commitment of Pennsylvania's 9,600 dairy farm families to producing delicious and nutritious dairy products and keeping Pennsylvania agriculture the leading economic enterprise in the commonwealth," said Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes.

In dairy production, Pennsylvania ranks fourth with more than 617,000 cows producing an estimated 11.16 billion pounds of milk.

Pennsylvania's dairy manufacturers also continue to be among the nation's leaders in the production of butter, ice cream, and cheese.

Named the state's official beverage on April 29, 1992, milk is often referred to as "nature's most perfect product" for its great nutritional values and the wide variety of dairy products available to meet every person's taste. Milk is also noted as an excellent source of calcium, protein, vitamin D, and riboflavin.

Hayes said, "Every month is 'Got Milk' time in Pennsylvania."

To learn more about Pennsylvania's dairy industry, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at (717) 787-4737 or the local dairy promotion organization.

Organic Agriculture Farm, Pasture Walk June 18

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Organic agriculture in Southeast Pennsylvania will be showcased June 18, at 7 p.m., at Green Haven Farm, 99 Noll Lane, Fleetwood.

Hosts Brian and Holley Moyer farm 27 acres, raising poultry, sheep, and dairy goats. The products are marketed through two CSAs, restaurants, two farmers' markets, a food co-op, and on-the-farm sales. They market their products as grass fed.

Footbaths will be used when you arrive, so please wear appropriate footwear (rubber boots). If you have traveled outside this country in the past two weeks, please stay home. Thank you!

June Is Dairy Month Celebration June 5

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — June is Dairy Month celebration is scheduled June 5 at noon here on the state capitol steps.

Sponsors include the Promotion Program/ADADC Mid East and the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association. The program includes building a giant ice cream sundae, a proclamation for June Dairy Month from Gov. Schweiker, statements from dairy industry leaders, and a celebrity milk mustache contest.

For more information, Tom Smith, industry relations manager, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program/American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110, (717) 787-6903, fax (614) 890-1636, or e-mail: tsmith@drink-milk.com.

Agriculture Secretary Encourages Farmers To Participate In Surveys

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes encouraged all farmers to participate in both the 2002 Farm Identification Survey and the June Agricultural Survey.

The purpose of these two surveys is to improve the farm count in the 2002 Census of Agriculture, to begin in December.

"As the lifeblood of Pennsylvania's Number 1 industry, every farmer should and must be counted in the 2002 Census of Agriculture," Hayes said. "These preliminary surveys help ensure that and greatly help the state Department of Agriculture, which depends on timely and accurate statistics to develop appropriate programs that assist and serve our farmers."

In mid-April, the USDA's National Agriculture Statistics Service sent out more than 11,000 copies of the 2002 Farm Identification Survey across Pennsylvania. The intent of the survey is to identify potential farms prior to the start of the 2002 Census of Agriculture.

The Farm Identification Survey is a seven-question form to see if any previously unknown operations meet the USDA farm definition, defined as "any place from which $1,000 or more of agricultural products were produced and sold, or normally would have been sold, during the census year." The simple "yes" or "no" questions ask about growing crops or raising livestock in any quantity. This short survey should take less than five minutes to complete.

Hayes noted that the Census of Agriculture includes more than just traditional agricultural crops such as field crops, livestock, dairy, and poultry. It also includes Christmas trees, mushrooms, nursery and greenhouse products, honey, aquaculture, rabbits, exotic livestock, and more.

Hayes added that while the USDA will be mailing a second survey to anyone that did not respond in April, the department will not be contacting farmers who participated in the 1997 Agriculture Census.

As part of the Ag Census Program, the USDA also does an estimate for farmers who are not on the mailing list through the June Agricultural Survey, which is used to measure agricultural production and grower demographics.

During May and June, field interviewers will be visiting about 200 one-square mile land segments across Pennsylvania. With the assistance of aerial photography, they will check for agriculture on every acre within each segment of land. Information from these 200 segments, and 100 more in the fall, will allow the Ag Statistics Service to estimate the number of farms not on the mailing list for the 2002 Ag Census.

As with all surveys from Ag Statistics, the responses to these surveys are confidential and will not be provided to any individual person or organization. The farm mailing list is also confidential to the Ag Statistics Service.

Upon completion of the surveys, Agriculture Census forms will be sent out in December to 2.75 million potential farms and ranches nationwide. In Pennsylvania, these efforts are coordinated by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, which is both a USDA field office as well as the statistical bureau within the state Department of Agriculture.

For information on the Farm Identification Survey, 2002 Ag Census, or to request a survey form, contact the National Agricultural Statistic Services at (888) 4AG-STAT or (888) 424-7828. Questions concerning the June Agricultural Survey should be directed to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service at (800) 498-1518.

All-American Dairy Show Continues To Grow

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 2002 All-American Dairy Show will take place September 22-26 at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg.

Entering its 39th year, the All-American Dairy Show continues to exhibit high quality dairy genetics from Pennsylvania and other states. Many dairy animals entered in the competition have achieved national recognition for their pedigree, milk production, and type quality. Expositions like the All-American Dairy Show provide an opportunity for dairy breeders and other persons associated with the dairy industry to exchange ideas and seek information to help advance America's great dairy team.

"The All-American Dairy Show is one of the great agricultural expositions in the nation and a spectacular showcase for the dairy industry," said Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes. "Expositions, like the All-American, bring the very best of our dairy industry together. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is pleased to have the All-American at our Farm Show Complex; and, we are pleased to provide financial resources for the exposition."

The All-American Dairy Show was started in 1963 to recognize the importance of genetic quality and excellent dairy cattle. At this time in its history, the All-American Dairy Show takes pride in setting an exemplary standard of excellence on the national show circuit. The Pennsylvania-based dairy show was recognized at the 2001 International Association of Fairs and Expositions (IAFE) 111th annual convention in Las Vegas, Nev. as the Best Non-Fair Agricultural Event.

Over the span of five days, eight states, regional, and national dairy shows will be conducted. The All-American will culminate on Sept. 26 with the Parade of Breed Champions in the large arena and the selection of the supreme champion.

To better serve agricultural expositions such as the All-American, the PA Department of Agriculture has initiated a landmark construction project at its Farm Show Complex. The historic $76 million investment in Pennsylvania agriculture will provide a world-class facility for many of the nation's world-class expositions.

Over $160,000 will be offered in premiums at the 2002 All-American. Each entry at the All-American will receive a cash award.

For the first time at the All-American Dairy Show, a supreme champion will be selected from the Youth Show. The winning youth will receive a cash premium of $2,000.

To help youth exhibitors invest in their future, each youth breed grand champion will also receive a $1,000 savings bond for their achievement.

"The future of America's dairy industry rests in the hands of today's young men and women. The All-American Dairy Show strives to recognize their importance," Hayes said. "Everyday, talented young people work with their dairy herds, gaining hands-on experience in dairy genetics, striving to breed high quality show cattle, learned responsibility, and demonstrating good showmanship."

Over $8,400 in premiums will be offered to recognize the high quality of dairy animals taking center stage during the youth shows in the large arena of the Farm Show Complex. This is the first year that premiums will be offered in all six youth breed shows.

Total youth premiums offered at the 2002 All-American reflect a 137 percent increase from 2001.

For more information on the 2002 All-American Dairy Show, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at (717) 787-2905.

Robert Rumler Scholarship Awarded To Wisconsin Grad

RATTLEBORO, Vt. - Nate Zwald of Madison, Wis., is the 2002 winner of the Robert H. Rumler Scholarship, sponsored by Holstein Association USA.

Zwald, who received his bachelor's in ag economics and his master's in dairy science, will pursue a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Zwald works at Alta Genetics in Madison, where he coordinates the collection of data from herd management programs. He also serves as instructor for the UW-Madison Farm and Industry Short Course. He prepares and presents lectures on genetic improvement of dairy cattle.

Zwald was raised on Bomaz Farms, a 500-cow registered Holstein farm, in Hammond, Wis. Still involved with the family farm, he merchandises and purchases embryos and cattle, manages the herd, and trains new employees in milking parlor and facilities management.

Zwald plans to eventually earn a doctorate in dairy science and either continue teaching at the college level or do consulting for farmers through agribusiness. "A master's in business administration will help me make the transition from being a scientist to a businessman with a scientific outlook," said Zwald.

The Robert H. Rumler Scholarship was established in recognition of Robert Rumler's 36 years of service to the Holstein Association. This award goes to an individual pursing a MBA degree and who exhibits traits of leadership, management intuitiveness, and personal qualities through hands-on experience.

Learn Your Cost Of Producing Milk

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dairy producers in central Pennsylvania can participate in a hands-on workshop that will enable them to determine their cost of producing 100 pounds of milk.

Penn State Dairy Alliance and the Central Susquehanna Valley Dairy Extension Team have scheduled a DairyCOP$ workshop for Wednesday, June 26, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The program will be held in the computer lab of the municipal library on Main Street in Bloomsburg.

DairyCOP$ (Dairy Cost of Production System) is a computer spreadsheet developed by Brad Hilty, Information Management Specialist, with Penn State Dairy Alliance program. The spreadsheet compiles financial and production data from a dairy farm and calculates the farm's accrual cost of producing 100 pounds of milk.

Participants in this workshop will enter their 2001 data into the program and have an opportunity to compare their costs of production to other farms in the workshop, as well as a database of farms from around the state.

According to Hilty, "Knowing what it cost to produce 100 pounds of milk is critical to maintaining a competitive position in today's dairy environment. It is the foundation for establishing sound risk management strategies."

DairyCOP$ groups expenses into several common categories, making it possible for dairy businesses of different sizes and management styles to fairly compare their production costs.Participants will receive a disk with the program, so they can take it home and use it on their own computer. DairyCOP$ can be used at anytime throughout the year, enabling producers to calculate their cost of production as often as the desire.

The registration fee for this workshop is $50, which includes lunch and all materials. There is a $12 charge for additional people from the same farm.

Producers interested in participating in this program should call the Dairy Alliance Office at 888-373-PADA or e-mail bhilty@psu.edu.

Beef, Pork Production Set Record Highs For April

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Commercial red meat production for the U.S. totaled 3.90 billion pounds in April, up 11 percent from the 3.51 billion pounds produced in April 2001 and a record high for April, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASA).

Beef production, at 2.19 billion pounds, was 13 percent above the previous year and a record high for April. Cattle slaughter totaled 2.95 million head, up 9 percent from April 2001. The average live weight was 1,227 pounds, up 41 pounds from April a year ago.

Veal production totaled 16.1 million pounds, 6 percent above April a year ago. Calf slaughter totaled 82,000 head, up 10 percent from April 2001. The average live weight was 327 pounds, down 13 pounds from April a year ago.

Pork production totaled 1.67 billion pounds, up 9 percent from the previous year and a record high for April. Hog kill totaled 8.43 million head, 8 percent above April 2001. The average live weight was 267 pounds, up 2 pounds from April a year ago.

Lamb and mutton production, at 19.1 million pounds, was down 5 percent from April 2001. Sheep slaughter totaled 278,300 head, 4 percent below last year. The average live weight was 138 pounds, down 2 pounds from April a year ago.

January-April red meat production was 15.2 billion pounds, 4 percent above the previous year. Accumulated beef production was up 6 percent from last year, veal was down 4 percent, pork was up 2 percent, and lamb and mutton production was down 4 percent.

Pennsylvania's State Board Preserves 35 Additional Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Building on the nation's number one state farmland preservation initiative, Pennsylvania's State Farmland Preservation Board approved 35 additional farms totaling 3,007 acres.

Since 1989, Pennsylvania has now preserved 1,910 farms totaling nearly 229,000 acres including 125 new farms totaling 13,675 acres since the launch of its "2002 farms in 2002" initiative earlier this year.

"Our farmland preservation achievements in recent years have been remarkable examples of teamwork on the part of each county and the state's Bureau of Farmland Preservation," Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes said. "Through this partnership, Pennsylvania is setting the standard in farmland preservation across the country."

Fifty-three counties participate in the state farmland preservation program. The commonwealth purchases the development rights, referred to as easements, to preserve Pennsylvania's prime farmland and open space.

A list of farms preserved in May under the Pennsylvania program by county, including farm name and location, follows:

Berks County

• Warren and Hannah Berger, Richmond and Maxatawny townships.

• Gerald and Ilona Houp, Oley Township.

• Timothy and Deborah Kurtz, Caernarvon Township.

• Wayne and William Lesher, Upper Tulpehocken Township.

• Janet Schlegel, Oley Township.

• Richard Schlegel, Oley Township.

• Gary and Sharon Stoltzfus, Caernarvon Township.

Bucks County

• Arthur Impertore Sr., Solebury Township.

Chester County

• Dennis and Eleanor Bush, West Fallowfield Township.

• John, Eleanor, Andrew, and April Gawrys, South Coventry Township.

• Laurel Valley Farms, Inc., New Garden Township.

• John and Sally Stees, West Fallowfield Township.

Cumberland Township

• Paul and Grace Hornbaker, Southampton Township.

Erie County

• Harold and Norma Wiser, Fairview Township.

Fayette County

• Daniel and Cindy Komarinski, Wharton Township.

Lancaster County

• J. Richard and Nancy Garber, West Donegal Township.

• Gary and Dianne Neff, Manor Township.

• Dennis and Karen Stoner, East Earl Township.

• Franklin Zink, East Donegal Township.

Lehigh County

• Peter and Margaret Markel, Weisenberg Township.

Montgomery County

• William and Kathleen Hutt, New Hanover Township.

Schuylkill County

• John and Linda Garber, West Penn Township.

York County

• Victor and Lauren Cook, Warrington Township.

The State Agricultural Land Preservation Board also approved the preservation of 12 farms totaling 705 acres in Chester, Lancaster, and Monroe counties.

To assist farmers in planning easement purchases, the Department of Agriculture sponsors the "Installment Purchase Agreement Program" that allows landowners to defer capital gains taxes and county preservation programs, by virtue of installment payments, to fund other farmland preservation efforts. Two farms preserved at the May meeting, one from Cumberland County and the other from Lancaster County, were approved through the program.

For more information concerning Pennsylvania's farmland preservation initiative, contact the department's Bureau of Farmland Preservation at (717) 783-3167 or visit the Department of Agriculture's homepage through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us PA, Keyword: "agriculture."

Expo Features Environmental Resources For Pork Production

DES MOINES, IA — Pork producers can discuss innovative environmental management and regulatory programs with specialists at the Pork Checkoff-funded Environmental Education Center at World Pork Expo June 6-8 at the Iowa State Fairgrounds in Des Moines.

"This will be an excellent opportunity for pork producers to obtain environmental information, valuable in the day-to-day and future planning of their operation," said Max Schmidt, a pork producer from Elma, Iowa, and chairman of the Pork Checkoff's Environment Committee.

The Environmental Education Center will have exhibits that represent the Pork Checkoff-funded programs, including the Odor Solutions Initiative (OSI), the Environmental Assurance Program (EAP), and the Environmental Stewards Award program.

Environmental Stewards Award winners will talk about their environmental practices. Technical experts and information from universities, extension, USDA-ARS, and conservation groups also will be available.

Producers can find answers to questions related to environmental management.

Experts will be available to answer questions regarding diet manipulation to reduce manure nutrients and odor emissions, treatment technologies being evaluated for reduction of odors, information needed for a proper comprehensive nutrient management plan (CNMP), the economics of some of these new technologies or management practices, and how concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO) regulations may affect them.

Also at the Environmental Education Center, producers can use the checkoff-funded Internet site HYPERLINK http://www.porkboard.org www.porkboard.org, which provides pork producers with a convenient, comprehensive resource for environmental compliance and program information.

April Milk Production Up 5 Percent In N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y.) — Milk production in New York State during April totaled 1.02 billion pounds, according to the New York Agricultural Statistics Service.

This total is up 5 percent from the 972 million pounds of milk produced in New York during April 2001. Both a larger milking herd and a higher output of milk per cow contributed to the increase.

The 679,000 dairy cows on farms during April was up slightly from the previous month, and up 1 percent from a year earlier. Milk per cow averaged 1,500 pounds during the month, up 50 pounds from the April 2001 output.

New York dairy farmers received an average of $12.90 per hundredweight of milk sold in April, down 50 cents from the previous month and $2.50 below a year earlier.

Sidney And Alberta Riggs Selected For Honors

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Sidney and Alberta Riggs, owners of ErReR Hill Farms, located near Friedens, Somerset County, have been selected to receive the 2002 Seedstock Breeders Award from the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

The couple first bought Angus cattle in cooperation with Sidney's father, Eugene, in 1957 and have embarked on a comprehensive herd and breed improvement program since that time through many different management and breeding efforts.

According to Terry Shearer, president of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, "in many ways the Riggs breeding and management program exemplifies the modern application of basic principles of animal genetics to improvement of beef cattle.

"This has enhanced the genetic capabilities of beef cattle to even further increase the efficiency of using feed and other land resources in producing higher-quality, more nutritious beef for the consumer."

ErReR Hill Farms has participated in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Meat Animal Evaluation performance-testing program since the 1970's and have owned the top-indexing and the top-selling bull.

In addition, ErReR Hill Farm have held three performance-tested bull sales on the farm, which is unique among Pennsylvania breeders of any beef cattle breed. The number of cows in the herd, as well as the improved genetic ability, has allowed performance testing and subsequent sales to be accomplished similar to the larger herds in the western states.

Recently, ErReR Hill Farm held its first production sale which averaged $3,700 per lot, with a top sale of $19,000cattle sold through this sale were purchased by buyers from 15 different states.

Due to the success in breeding and sales management of the herd, Penn State University's extension and research programs has benefited from embryos and live cattle being donated to its extension and research programs. This has resulted in a long-term agreement between ErReR Hill Farm and Penn State for continued cooperation and even further enhancement of the genetic ability of both the university and ErReR Hill herds.

In addition to the support of the Penn State University program directly, the Riggs family has supported 4-H and FFA events in the county for many years. They have been the top buyers of livestock at the county fair, and have contributed to state youth programs.

Another example of the dedication of Sidney and Alberta Riggs to the importance of education, particularly youth involved in agriculture, has been the continued support from the initiation of the Pennsylvania Beef Expo Junior Show and other Junior Expo activities.

The Pennsylvania Beef Expo Junior Show has become the largest junior event in the Northeast states, and could not exist without contributions from individuals such as the Riggs family. ErReR Hill Farm has been the site of many education events, including field days and farm tours.

In addition to the outstanding genetics that has been developed in the cattle herd by the Riggs family, there is application of many environmental stewardship and land-conserving practices that have not only conserved the natural resources of the farm under the Riggs management, but has also served as an environmental education aid to both farm and non-farm groups and individuals.

Countless other producers have benefited from observing the effectiveness of soil conservation practices that not only conserve natural resources, but also improve the efficiency of beef production. ErReR Farms received the Environmental Stewardship Award from the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association in 1998, and has continued to make even further improvements since that time.

More information about the honors and awards presented by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA) and the National Beef Cattlemen's Association can be obtained by calling 814-238-5888.

New Insight On Pollinators May Aid Strawberry Production

TROY, Ohio — A steady rainfall soaks strawberry fields in this town just outside of Dayton, but the weather doesn't deter Ohio State University entomologists from trekking through standing water and mud to record the growth progression of strawberry blooms — food for many insects whose pollination transforms the flowers into fruit.

"The blooms have to be open wide enough for the insects to get in and pollinate," said Ohio State research assistant Diane Hartzler, pointing to blooms that were either partially or fully open. "If the blooms don't get pollinated, the result is irregular fruit, or no fruit at all."

Though no pollinators were to be seen on this wet day, such observations are giving university researchers a better handle as to how insects, namely native feral or wild bees, affect strawberry fruit set, development and yield.

"People used to think that honey bees were the main pollinators of strawberry plants. They pollinate brambles like raspberries and blackberries," said Roger Williams, Ohio State leader of small fruit entomology with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster, Ohio. "Though other insects like ants and beetles help pollinate strawberries, we have found that the primary pollinators are native bees."

Williams said the startling conclusion came after three years of identifying bee species that were visiting strawberry fields in Wooster and Moreland, Ohio. The researchers recorded 19 different species, all of which were native except the honey bee. Bee species included carpenter bees, leaf cutting bees, orchid bees, bumble bees, digger bees, cuckoo bees and small, metallic bees of the family Halictidae.

"We didn't know what to expect as not much literature exists that describes strawberry pollinators," said Williams.

Williams and his associates have expanded their research to other areas of the state in the hopes of compiling a comprehensive guide of bee pollinators. The goal of their work is to more clearly define which species pollinate strawberry plants, how field placement affects pollination and ultimately establish a new market of beekeeping in Ohio.

"More and more growers want to get their crop off earlier in the season. If we can identify which bee species pollinate fields in certain areas, then we may be able to create a new opportunity for beekeepers to provide those species to the grower," said Williams.

The honey bee, European in origin, clearly dominates the beekeeping industry in Ohio. More than 5,000 apiaries, or places where colonies are kept, exist in every county in the state. Honey bees are essential to Ohio's vegetable production, as the insects account for 80 percent of all crop pollination.

Though honey bees do pollinate strawberry plants, Williams said it's clear that native bees are the main pollinators, a discovery that could give both strawberry production and beekeeping a boost.

"One reason why we want to look into identifying and possibly marketing native bees is because of the recent problems honey bees have with mites and diseases," said Williams. "Also if the strawberry plant doesn't get pollinated, it affects fruit size, fruit quality and overall market value."

Williams said that where strawberry fields are located in the landscape might also have an impact on how often the plants are pollinated. In their studies, the researchers found that strawberry fields located near native habitats, like woods, swamps, ponds and prairies, had higher berry development and less deformed berries, than those strawberry fields found in and around residential areas.

More Rain Could Mean Higher Corn Prices

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Corn prices are likely to increase within the next several weeks if wet weather persists throughout the eastern Corn Belt, says an Ohio State University Extension agricultural economist.

"Based upon the Chicago Board of Trade, corn prices right now are $2.30 and could climb 10 to 12 cents higher because of the weather," said Matt Roberts. "I think the real question is what it will be like the next two weeks. If wet weather continues for both Indiana and Ohio, we'll see those corn prices start to rise and soybean prices soften."

Excessive rainfall in Indiana, Ohio and parts of Illinois has significantly delayed both corn and soybean planting. Ohio corn growers only have 17 percent of the corn crop planted, compared to 74 percent this same time last year. Planting is two weeks behind the five-year average. Six percent of the soybean crop has been planted so far, compared to 70 percent last year.

Roberts said that growers are remaining optimistic that they will get their corn crop in the ground on time. "The window for planting corn still has not closed," he said. "It's very reasonable given Ohio's typical growing conditions that one can plant corn through the end of May and still see very good yields given a good growing season."

He added, however, that if growers are pushed to the limit, a significant shift from corn to soybean acreage could occur that might impact farm profitability over the long term.

"Given the new Farm Bill, if we see a significant shift to soybeans, that might begin to impact farm profitability simply because soybean support is not as generous as it has been in the past," said Roberts.

The government's loan rate for soybeans in the 2002 Farm Bill is set at $5 per bushel, down from $5.26, while corn was increased from $1.89 to $1.98 per bushel.

"The changes in prices changes the relative profitability of those crops," said Roberts. "By switching acreage from corn to soybeans, there will probably be some implications, but it's still a little bit early to worry about the impacts of large scale shifts."

Roberts said that analysts are calculating a shift back to larger soybean acreage than what was originally forecasted in the USDA's annual prospective plantings report released in March. "There is little doubt that if the wet weather persists for another week or so, that the corn harvest will be smaller than currently projected," he said.

Despite the grim outlook on corn planting, Roberts speculates that the situation is not severe enough to drive farmers to collect their government payments.

"I don't think we are anywhere near the point where we are talking about abandonment where people are taking payments because they couldn't get their crop planted at all or where those acres that got planted were flooded so bad that it killed the seedlings," said Roberts. "If growers haven't gotten anything in the ground for corn, there is still a window where they can get soybeans in the ground. I think they would prefer to try to plant something than take payments and have those fields sit idle for the rest of the season."

Roberts added that it wouldn't be until mid-June before any indication surfaces that farmers have made claims on abandonment payments.

Conservation Sign-Up Through June 30

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Farm Service Agency will be accepting applications through June 30 for the Environmental Quality Incentive Program (EQIP). This sign-up period will be held for farms located in the Chickies Creek Watershed.

EQIP works primarily in areas where there are significant natural resource concerns, such as soil erosion, water quality and quantity, wildlife habitat, wetlands, and forest and grazing lands. Priority is given to areas where state or local governments offer financial, technical, or educational assistance and to areas where agricultural improvements will help meet water quality objectives. Activities must be carried out according to a conservation plan.

EQIP is one of several federal, state, and local conservation programs that farmers can use to solve their natural resource concerns. EQIP offers financial, educational, and technical help to install or implement structural, vegetative, and management practices called for in five- to 10-year contracts.

These practices — which include manure management systems, pest management and erosion control — help improve and maintain the health of natural resources. Cost sharing may pay up to 75 percent of the costs of certain conservation practices. Half of the funding for EQIP is targeted to livestock-related natural resource concerns and the remainder to other significant conservation priorities.

Contracts are awarded on a competitive basis among applicants in the Chickies Watershed. Proposals are ranked using a scoring system based on ballpark estimate of total program costs of the practices planned. Requests can be made at the Farm Service Agency, located at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, or phone (717) 397-6235.

general manager of Pennsylvania DHIA, interim dairy and animal science department head at Penn State, and coordinator of the department's extension program.

Widely regarded by his colleagues as a dedicated team player, Heald has devoted himself to promoting technology changes using on-farm dairy advisory teams. He also developed a business management course for producers.

Heald said that his achievements were made possible through the cooperation of his colleagues and students.

"None of it could have happened without teamwork," he said.

Lisa Holden, former graduate student under Heald and now associate dairy science professor at Penn State, said Heald was always willing to offer help when needed — even before being asked.

According to Michael O'Connor, Penn State dairy and animal science extension coordinator, Heald has had a profound impact on the industry.

"Thanks to Bill, many producers are more aggressive, more demanding, and more knowledgeable," O'Connor said.

In retirement, Heald plans to devote himself to woodworking, a longtime hobby he will now have more time to pursue. He has already enrolled for a traditional furniture making course at the Thaddeus Stevens school in Lancaster.

"I just enjoy doing new things," he said, summing up his career and future plans.

Heald and his wife, Judy, live east of State College near Potters Mills. They have two children. Evan is a medical doctor teaching at the University of Virginia, and Beth Moore is a director of special projects for the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania.

Holstein Association Hires Manager For Animal Identification Program

Jodi Luttropp

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Jodi Luttropp has joined the National Holstein Association as manager, dairy and identification programs.

A May 2001 Dairy Science and Life Sciences Communications graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Luttropp comes to Brattleboro from Columbus, Wis., where she worked for the Vita Plus Corporation as dairy nutritionist.

Facilitation of the National Farm Animal Identification and Records (F.A.I.R.) Program — Animal Identification for our Nation — will be her primary focus.

According to Holstein Association USA Chief Executive Officer John M. Meyer, "The need for a national identification system for all bovines may be essential for U.S. producers to have a continued, viable, domestic and international market for their cattle, beef, semen, embryos and manufactured dairy products.

"The National F.A.I.R. Program could become the network for all animal identification in this country. It currently consists of 958 herds with 148,859 animals in 17 states and is tracking animals from birth to slaughter in some locales already."

"The chronic wasting disease concerns in Wisconsin and the West illustrate how important it is to have one national database, with one American Identification Numbering (AIN) System. Jodi's strong leadership and communication skills will do a lot to advance the producer-driven National F.A.I.R. Program. We are fortunate to have Jodi on the 14-person National F.A.I.R. Team," Meyer said.

The Berlin, Wis., native who grew up on Lost-Elm Farm is no stranger to joint cooperation and consensus building as she coordinated the national Purebred Dairy Cattle Association's Breeds' Registry Study under the direction of Ted Halbach and Dr. George Shook while a student.

Additionally, Luttropp has had college internships with ABS Global, John Deere, and Cargill.

At Stricker's, It's June Dairy (Pasture Walk) Month

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

WERNERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Simple pasturing has made farming a lot more rewarding for grazier Forrest Stricker.

This month marks a special place, too, for those who want to learn more about dairy grazing. Stricker will host a pasture walk at his farm this coming Monday, June 3.

June is not only Dairy Month, but also Pasture Walk Month for many full-time and even would-be graziers.

Stricker, who has been dairying since 1978, began grazing in 1993. Now, every acre is grazed at the farm, which amounts to 270 tillable acres. The herd numbers 105 head of Holstein, Jersey, and Jersey-Holstein crossbreds.

Stricker, who farms with wife Barbara and sons Greg, 18, and Jeff, 15, is not on DHIA. But he ships an RHA of 13,000 pounds to Horizon Organic Milk, to a plant in Rocksbury, Delaware County, N.Y.

Stricker also feeds about 10 pounds of grain per cow, which includes corn, spelt, and minerals. To increase production, Stricker said he provides high-quality forage. He also tests the pasture forage quality.

"As for high quality, I let the cows tell me," said Stricker. "The cows are my forage lab."

Stricker also offers free-choice hay most of the time, except when lush. They cut hay for baleage, but offer year-round pasturing.

Stricker's pastures are comprised of orchardgrass, fescue, ryegrass, clover, and alfalfa.

He plans to increase herd size to about 130-150 cows in the future.

Animal reproductive issues will be the focus of topics discussed at the pasture walk at Stricker's farm on June 3, from 1 p.m.-3 p.m. Stricker has hosted such walks before, he noted.

The invited guest to lead the discussion will be Dr. Steve Washburn, North Carolina State University. Washburn's specialty is seasonality in dairy production, but he is ready to facilitate discussion among a wide area of topics, including crossbreeding, selection strategies, herd breeds, and goals and cow numbers.

There is no charge for the event but interested participants are asked to preregister with Penn State Cooperative Extension-Berks County, (610) 378-1327.

For more information, contact Mena Hautau, Extension Agent, Penn State Cooperative Extension-Berks County, P.O. Box 520, 1238 County Rd., Leesport, PA 19533-0520, (610) 378-1327; fax (610) 378-7961; or e-mail mmh10@psu.edu.

Look at the Lancaster Farming Farm Calendar on page A10 and stories throughout the newspaper in the weeks ahead for more pasture walk days and times.

Pasture Walks Abound In Summer

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A series of pasture walks have been organized by local graziers in cooperation with Lancaster County Cooperative Extension for people who are interested in grazing dairy cattle.

Hours for all the walks are 10 a.m.-2 p.m., DST. For biosecurity reasons, all who attend are encouraged to wear clean clothes, wash their footwear before visiting the host farm and before returning home, and stay out of feeding and young stock areas.

Lunch plans vary with each location, as described here. In an effort to help host farms make necessary arrangements, reservations will be appreciated and can be made by calling the Lancaster Cooperative Extension office at (717) 394-6851.

Dates, places, and other details are:

• June 6. Ivan Esh Farm, Lancaster, 2210 Creek Hill Road, south of Rt. 23 and west of Hartman Station Road. Ivan is a seasonal, all-grass grazier with 120 acres and 75 cows. A pasture walk will be conducted in the morning. Afternoon discussions will center on his double-6 swing parlor, mowers, and irrigation equipment. Refreshments will be available, but bring your own lunch.

• June 27. Arden Landis Farm, north of Kirkwood at 667 Puseyville Road, west of Rt. 472. Arden is a certified organic producer with 120 acres. He milks 90 cows in a double-8 swing parlor. In the morning, there will be a pasture walk and observation of grass variety plots and liquid waste irrigation. The afternoon speaker will be Joel McNair, editor of Graze and writer for Milk Weed. Refreshments will be available, but bring your own lunch.

• Aug. 1. Jeff Stoltzfus Farm, south of Kirkwood at 32 Lakeview Road, east of Rt. 472. Jeff is a certified organic producer, an all-grass grazier with 150 acres. He milks 70 cows in a homemade parlor and has a simple manure and mortality composting system. Drinks will be available, but bring your own lunch.

• Sept. 19. John Stoltzfus Farm, Parkesburg, north of Rt. 30 and west of Rt. 10 at 7643 N. Moscow Road. John is a certified organic producer with 50 acres of grass and 11 years of grazing experience. He milks 50 cows and feeds a mixture of grass and TMR. Lunch will be provided.

• Oct. 10. Jake Zook Farm, southwest of Christiana at 1178 White Oak Road, between Nobel Road and Bartville Road. Jake has nine years of grazing experience and 100 acres of grass. He milks 50 cows and feeds no grain. A light lunch and drinks will be provided.

Md. Opens Ethanol Station

ROCKVILLE, Md. — Montgomery County recently opened its first station to sell E85 fuel, a blend with high ethanol content. Douglas M. Duncan, county executive, opened the new station, in Rockville at the county's refueling facility. Although traditionally this site has only been available to county vehicles, Duncan is opening this E85 pump to the general public to use the fuel through a credit card system.

E85, a blend of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline, is a clean-burning fuel produced in the United States primarily from corn, a renewable resource. E85 improves air quality by reducing carbon monoxide, particulate matter and oxides of nitrogen, and is the leading fuel for reducing greenhouse gases. Ethanol may soon become a homegrown Maryland product.

The opening of the Montgomery County station became possible through a grant received by the Maryland Energy Administration from the United States Department of Energy. The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board (MGPUB) has been instrumental in the actual planning and development of this project. The opening of this station supports federal and state energy policies to expand the use of alternative fuels and reduce the country's dependence on foreign oil.

Chute-Side Summer Series Offered

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Due to increased interest the Pennsylvania Beef Council is offering a summer series of Chute-Side training session for the Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance program.

Dates and locations follow. Starting time 6 p.m. Phone numbers are for directions:

• June 26 — Tioga County: Mike Ackley Farm, Sabinsville at (814) 628-4022, Earle Robbins extension agent at (570) 724-9120.

Bedford Family Builds For Dairy Herd Expansion

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD VALLEY (Bedford Co.) — "We all have our talents and our jobs to do," said Don Llewellyn of the two-family farm he and his brother, Steve, own in lush, green, Bedford Valley.

"It's going into the fourth generation and we want to keep it that way," Don said. The Llewellyns are presently undertaking a huge expansion, which includes a new barn and manure lagoon.

The Llewellyn farm includes 500 acres of land in this picturesque area. They are milking 125 Holsteins and have an additional 125 young cattle. Another herd of Holsteins is already purchased and will arrive as soon as the new barn is completed.

"We had to expand," Don said. "We have two nephews who want to join in the business and Steve has a son who may be joining us in a few years."

Don's daughters have pursued interests other than farming.

Steve and Don gave much serious thought to their expansion program before attacking the venture, doing two years of research before turning a shovelful of dirt. "We visited farms in three counties, gathering ideas from each," Don explained. "We tried to take the ideas we liked best and incorporate them into what we are doing here."

Bright and spacious, the new barn will allow for milking 200 dairy cattle allowing 15 square feet per cow. It includes and area for young cattle and even a hospital section for sick cows.

"With this many dairy cattle you usually have at least one which is not feeling well," Steve said.

A cow with a sore foot or one having trouble calving will be put in the hospital area to relieve stress.

"Another thing we have learned is the importance of keeping the cows cool," Steve said. "We placed the barn with a good east/west air flow. We will have large patio doors by the milking parlor which will allow for both light and ventilation.

"We needed an easier way to milk cows and we think we have found it."

Don extended thanks to all of the farmers who contibuted ideas for the expansion.

"We talked with farmers all over the state. Locally we relied heavily on ideas from Alan Ickes, Russell Wyles, Sollenbergers, and Frosty Hollow. We interviewed equipment dealers and they had a lot of patience with us.

While the farm will not be totally computerized, there is a trend in that direction. Cow records for breeding and production will be kept on the computer and the sorting gate will also be computer operated.

A lined manure lagoon will add to the efficiency and cleanliness of the new facility.

Everyone in the Llewellyn family is excited about the new facilities.

Sue, Mike, and Steve Llewellyn take a break at the new sorting gate installed on their Bedford County farm as part of a dairy facility expansion.

"We all pitch in and help here," Don said. "Everybody has talents and chores. And everyone has helped with the construction. We have all wielded a broom and swung a paint brush. We've all had to double up on the routine farm chores in order to keep everything running."

The old barn will remain intact and become a shelter for dry cows and young heifers.

Twilight Farmers' Market Opens

BEL AIR, Md. — The last of the Harford Farmers' Markets was set to open this week with the start of the Friday Twilight Farmers' Market from 5 p.m. to dusk at Rockfield Manor off Maryland Rt. 22 in Bel Air.

Conducted the last Friday of each month through October, this particular market is the only one in Maryland to feature musical entertainment, wine, and quick supper items. Also, since this market is located at Rockfield, customers can enjoy the park's hiking trails and grounds. The Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation and the Harford County Office of Economic Development sponsor the market.

According to Harford County Agricultural Coordinator John Sullivan, many of last year's twilight market vendors are scheduled to return along with new sellers. Kate Dallam's, of Broom's Bloom Dairy of Bel Air, will be back with a variety of cheese and milksoap along with lamb. David Keyes, Mount Felix Farm in Havre de Grace, also will have a variety of cheese to sell.

Organic compost and fresh vegetables will be for sale at the booth, belonging to veteran farmers' market vendor Richard Watters, of Sweet Potato Hill Farm of Forest Hill. Cybil Preston, Jarrettsville, will have fresh vegetables, honey and bee's wax products. The Lohrs, Churchville, will sell fresh fruit. Fiore's Winery, Pylesville, will sell their products. Other vendors will have baked goods.

Bel Air's other two markets operate Tuesdays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Saturdays from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Mary Risteau State Office Building on South Bond Street.

The Havre de Grace Farmers' Market is open Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon on Pennington Avenue between Washington Street and Union Avenue.

Vendors at Edgewood's Farmers' Market sell farm-related goods on Thursdays from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. next to the MARC Train Station on Edgewood Road.

New Jersey Farm Slated For National Holstein Tour

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

The Eachus family stand in their newest free-stall barn. Participants of the National Holstein Convention Tour June 25 will have the opportunity to see the layout of the operation, which includes an expanded manure pit with two concrete bridges across to enable heavy equipment to cross. Front loaders are used to scrape the manure from the freestall barns into the manure pit.

PILESGROVE, N.J. — Atlantic City conjures up images of sand, casinos, and concrete. Less than 50 miles away, along one of the main arteries leading into Atlantic City, is Myerwood Farms, the antithesis of a metropolis.

The seventh generation farm is a patchwork of verdant green growth interspersed with freshly plowed fields and edged by sturdy trees. Even a white picket fence and flowering perennials around the white farmhouse exude a peaceful solitude.

But don't let that facade fool you. Myerwood Farms is one of the most modernized farms around and bustles with work, high management, and attention to details.

Passing motorists probably only notice the Civil War-era barns, which sit near the road. But behind the aging barns are rows of modern pole barns.

"We've lost count of how many we put up. We just put another one up whenever we need it," said Margery Eachus, through whose mother's side of the family the farm has been passed from generation to generation. It is the seventh generation farm for the Eachus' one-year-old granddaughter.

Margery, her husband Milton, daughter Melanie married to John Richman, and two sons, Kevin and Todd, keep things running smoothly. They milk 350 cows three times daily, and farm about 1,000 acres.

"This is pretty productive soil, no rocks, but a bit on the sandy side, which makes it highly erosive," Milton said.

"Folks from New Jersey call this the second hill east of Woodstown, but Pennsylvanians think this is flat," Margery said of the land. She remembers when her father let the cattle cross the road to graze on the other side.

It's hard to imagine that possibility with today's steady flow of traffic that speeds pass the farm.

"If you want to save your life, you got to take control," Milton said of the need to drive farm equipment from farm to farm.

When Milton and Margery married, they first farmed with her father and brother. They milked Guernseys for the premium given for butterfat.

After Margery and her husband took over the farm in 1980, they expanded the herd from 75 head to its present 350. The original farm is 205 acres, a neighboring 200-acre farm has been purchased, and an additional 500 acres is rented.

To meet consumers' changing demands, Guernseys were phased out and replaced with registered Holsteins. The rolling herd average is 28,315 pounds.

The family attributes that success to daughter Melanie, who is herd manager and oversees labor. Melanie was graduated from Virginia Tech, where she honed her knowledge of increasing production and raising quality animals.

"It's clean, healthy, comfortable cows with a high quality diet," Melanie said of the milk quantity and quality.

The difference that cow comfort can make is demonstrated by the results the farm experienced in 2000. That year they added their fifth freestall barn. With more room and comfort, the herd increased from an individual average of 100 to 107 pounds the first week in July.

The differences between the five free-stall barns show how the new totally open-sided ones are more for year-round cow comfort while the older ones were more for people comfort. The six-row, 160-head freestall barn has an outside exercise lot of concrete. Shades are used to sunscreen the lot during hot, sunny days.

The sunscreen really pays for itself, Melanie said. Before they put up the sunscreen, the cows didn't come out on hot days to use the exercise area.

A special needs barn is used for calf and hospital care. The modernized facilities are totally computerized. Electronic meters on the cow necks enable the family to keep close tabs on every part of management. The readings cause gates to open and close automatically to send cows to sort pens.

Deviation reports are run daily to pinpoint sick cows, detect cows in heat, or any other maladies. Only one person is needed for each milking time.

The milking parlor was recently expanded from a double eight to a 10 angle parabone, which allows 14 head to be in the parlor at one time. Five hours for each milking is required but can be managed by one person.

A capacity milk tank enables a trailerload of milk to be hauled out every other day. Milk is shipped to Dairylea.

Three different farms are used to divide heifers by age, which are always moved as a group and brought back to the main farm for breeding, then moved to another farm during freshening. Only top bull studs are used for breeding.

All heifers are classified. Some are shown at the South Jersey open dairy show and the state Holstein show.

Crops are harvested in a timely fashion and top quality forages purchased. In recent years, the family tore down four silos in favor of bunker.

The layout of the operation includes an expanded manure pit with two concrete bridges across to enable heavy equipment to cross. Front loaders are used to scrape the manure from the freestall barns into the manure pit.

Sand is used for bedding. Melanie explained that sand keeps somatic cell counts low.

New Jersey Farm Slated For National Holstein Tour

versity of New York Cobleskill. Kevin returned to the family farm to keep the equipment — of which they have an abundance — running smoothly.

Son Todd is studying engineering at Virginia Tech and continues to help on the farm.

Margery describes her duties as assistant herd manager, accountant, field chopper, and "Hannah sitter" (Hannah is their only granddaughter and is the child of daughter Melanie and her husband John).

Milton said that he feeds the cows, oversees the operation, and is phasing out.

In addition to the five family members working full-time on the farm, employees include five full-time Mexicans, a nephew, and a part-time retiree. The farm provides housing for the Mexican workers.

"They're good workers, but eventually they always return to their own country," Milton said.

Each employee is scheduled with 1½ days off weekly. "Except family — we don't get as much time off," Melanie said.

She and her husband live eight miles away on her husband's family farm, which is a corn and soybean operation. She works every day at Myerwood Farms but generally has off Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

"We're flexible enough so if one needs off, we can plan our schedule around it," Melanie said.

Myerwood Farms also hauls silage and does custom filling for other farms.

"We try to expand five percent a year," Margery said of the farm's plan.

"We have no trouble with zoning," Milton said of their ongoing expansion. "New Jersey wants to keep their farmers, so they do everything to help farmers.

"Farming is a good life, but it's lots of work getting it done," Milton said. "We might expand to 500 (milking cows) after that, we go to Arizona."

Melanie said the farm's success is the result of lots of work, high management, and attention to details.

Myerwood Farms will be on tour during the National Holstein Convention.

For the National Holstein Convention, Milton is chairman of the tours, Margery is in charge of registrations, and Melanie heads the Junior Holstein activities.

For more information, call the farm at (856) 769-2398.

Alfred University, College Explore Merger

ALFRED, N.Y. — Alfred University and Alfred State College will soon begin to explore the possibility of an eventual merger of two institutions of higher education, Alfred University President Charles M. Edmondson and Alfred State College President William D. Rezak recently announced.

The State University of New York (SUNY) has given its approval to these explorations of a "reconnection." Alfred State College started in 1908 as the state school of agriculture at Alfred University, but became a separate entity when SUNY was formed about 50 years ago.

"Because of the visionary leadership of Bill Rezak and Charley Edmondson, we are able to consider this exciting possibility of a public-private partnership that would benefit the entire region, and the state as a whole," said Richard Miller, vice chancellor and chief operating officer for SUNY.

The two presidents envision the potential for developing a major regional university, serving the educational and economic development needs of Western New York in ways not previously possible.

"We feel obligated to explore this possibility because of its potential for yielding a comprehensive private university with more than 5,000 students and an annual budget in excess of $80 million," said Edmondson. "Combined, we would be the largest employer in Allegany County with more than 1,000 employees.

Ritchie WaterMaster

WaterMaster has gained approval through extended use in feedlots and dairies across North America. It features heavy-wall roto-cast polyethylene one-piece body construction. Ritchie utilizes UV inhibitors...so it won't pit, crack or deteriorate like concrete. A solid wall of urethane foam insulation keeps water ice-free longer. WaterMaster options include constant flow or electric heat package with a 250 watt immersion heater and a supply line heater.

Corn Belt Feedstuff

St. Joseph, Mo.
May 28, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

CORN BELT FEEDSTUFF: Wholesale Bids. Truck or Rail dollars per ton. Feedstuffs prices were mixed for the week. Central regions of the U.S. received moisture over the weekend, with more predicted from Des Moines down to Austin tonight and tomorrow, and moving eastward. A few dry days last week and over the weekend aided farmers in planting. Even though we've seen above normal moisture, forecasters predicting average moisture and temperatures through the summer months. Corn and soybean markets look as if they could rise, given the cool, wet conditions which has effected planting and growing. Other feed ingredients pretty quiet with the exception of fat and grease markets, which are higher due to lower slaughter numbers and plant storage space. Hay remains steady, although demand is mixed, again depending on moisture conditions.

SOYBEAN MEAL: 48 percent rail 1.00 lower at 164.00-167.00. 48 percent truck 1.00 to 3.00 lower at 167.00-174.00 per ton.

CORN BY-PRODUCTS: Gluten Feed 21 percent, Interior Points, steady to 1.00 higher at 54.00-57.00; Chicago steady at 55.00-59.00. 60 percent Gluten Meal, Interior Points, steady to 5 00 higher at 217.00-225.00; Chicago 2.00 to 4 00 higher at 220.00-222.00 per ton. Rail Hominy Feed, Central Illinois Points, steady to 2.00 lower at 51.00-64.00; truck steady to 2.00 lower at 53.00-63.00. Crude Corn Oil was steady at 16.50-17.50 cents per pound.

FIELD DAY! PASTURE WALK!

Friday, June 14, 10 am to 3 pm, Rain or Shine

Focus will be on THE PROFIT POTENTIAL OF WELL MANAGED GRASS ON A LIMITED ACREAGE DAIRY FARM

At 10:00 AM we want to walk the pastures/hay fields and test plots while discussing grass varieties, how often each paddock was grazed or hayed, what varieties cows like best, the economics of grazing, body condition, herd health, pasture renovation, soil fertility, and general discussion on questions that come up.

LUNCH WILL BE SERVED AT NOON

After lunch we will sit down and focus more on dairy nutrition on grass. Speakers as follows:

1:15 Choosing the right forage program and species for YOUR farm, by TIM FRITZ former Penn State extension agent.

1:30 Maximizing the forage value of your grass, by John Thysson, Barenbrug forage specialist

2:00 Why do pasture-based rations work? Some pitfalls to avoid, by Bruce Kreider dairy nutrition White Oak Mills

2:30 A better understanding of Sorghum Sudangrass and Millet by Walter Moss. Moss Seed Co., Texas

2:50-3:00 Question & Answer Session

Location: Aaron King, 96 Paradise Lane Ronks, 1 mile west of Paradise, 2 miles east of Strasburg. (Look for Red Apple sign, Fairview Fruit Farm.)

Our goal is to help farmers improve their bottom line with high quality forages and grazing, thus keeping the family farm healthy and prosperous.

MEGA MILLET Hybrid Forage Pearl Millet is a new delayed maturing forage millet similar to Sorghum Sudan but has NO PRUSSIC ACID thus it's SAFE FOR HORSES. Yields aren't as high as MegaGreen but quality is even higher. Mega Millet should be grazed at 12 to 24 inches leaving a 6 inch stubble. Our cows pick up milk when grazing Mega Millet.

Mega Millet is widely adapted for different soil types and is very drought tolerant. It requires hot weather for maximum growth. Do not plant until soil temperature is 65 to 70 degrees.

Mega Millet similar to Sudangrass with higher quality and no prussic acid. Safe for horses.

A list of the winners of the June Dairy Month Recipe Contest will be printed in the June 29th edition.

Have a "mooey" delicious time celebrating June Dairy Month!

Charlie and Susan Zimmerman with children Yalonda, 8; Lorinda, 7; Delvin, 4; and Darren, 2, operate a 95-dairy cow herd in Myerstown.

Carole and Gordon Hoover with daughters Jill, 19; Brenda, 15; and Leslie, 11, are proud to be part of Lancaster County's backbone — the dairy industry.

STRAWBERRY PIZZA

Dough for favorite sugar cookies or snickledooles
8-ounces cream cheese, softened
¾ cup confectioners' sugar
8-ounces whipped cream topping

Spread cookie dough rather thin on pizza pan or on cookie sheet. Bake cookie dough according to recipe. Cool.

Beat together cream cheese and confectioners' sugar. Fold in whipped Topping:

3-ounce package strawberry-flavored Jell-O
½ cup sugar
1 cup hot water

Dissolve Jell-O and sugar in hot water. Add:

4 tablespoons corn starch

Cook corn starch and Jell-O mixture until clear, about 3 minutes in the microwave. Add:

4 cups sliced strawberries

Allow strawberry mixture to partially jel then pour over cream cheese mixture. Let set until completely jelled. Store in refrigerator. Cut into squares or pizza shapes and enjoy.

My husband and I celebrated 50 years in Aug. 2001. We have farmed all 50 years and have four children. The oldest daughter Vicky is a teacher in York. Son Bryon lives and works on the farm. Trudy works for Erie Insurance. Daughter Amy was the alternate state dairy princess 1993-94. She is now news anchor for morning and noon news at WTAJ-10 Altoona.

MAPLE PUDDING

2 cups brown sugar
1 cup flour
6 cups milk
3 eggs, beaten
3-4 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon maple flavoring
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar with flour and one cup milk. Add to beaten eggs. Bring remaining 5 cups milk to a boil and add egg mixture. Boil until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; add butter and flavoring. Cool.

This is a very smooth, delicious pudding. We live on a 95-dairy cow operation. The boys love whenever they can be out in the barn with their dad. The girls have 25 brown chickens, which they feed and gather eggs from every day.

STROMBOLI

1 frozen bread dough, thawed
½ pound cooked ham
⅓ pound salami
6-ounces sliced pepperoni
⅓ pound provolone cheese
⅓ pound Swiss cheese
⅓ pound mozzarella cheese
½ medium onion, sliced
½ green pepper, sliced
1 small can mushroom pieces
1 pint spaghetti sauce

Thaw bread dough by placing in small loaf pan sprayed with cooking spray; cover with plastic wrap, also sprayed with cooking spray. Let set on counter to thaw 8-10 hours. Cut up meats and cheeses in ¼-½-inch pieces. Chop onions, pepper, and mushrooms, and mix with meats and cheeses. Roll out bread dough on floured surface approximately 11x15-inches. Put mixture of meats, cheeses, and vegetables on bread; fold up sides and each end to form stromboli. Lightly brush top with cooking oil and sprinkle with oregano. Place on cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes before slicing. Serve with warmed spaghetti sauce on the side.

This recipe is a favorite with our whole family.

My husband Gordon and I live on a dairy farm north of Gap. We milk 110 registered Holstein cattle and farm 188 acres. Our daughter Jill, 19, just completed her freshman year at Penn State, where she is majoring in animal science. Our middle daughter Brenda is 15 and Leslie, our youngest, is 11.

Gordon and I believe it is important to be involved in and informed about our industry. I serve on the Lancaster County Dairy Promotion Committee, and all three of the

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Ahh, they look so peaceful lying there.

At rest. Asleep. Curled up, contentedly dreaming.

No, no, not little kids. Cows.

As dawn lightens the early morning darkness, and a blush of pink washes across the eastern sky, they become visible out in the pasture. Dots of black and white, lounging on the soft green grass, blissfully enjoying the morning's peacefulness.

And then — like all kids at times — they wake up and turn into holy terrors.

Well, sometimes anyway.

Most of the time, cows embody that image we celebrate in June, traditional Dairy Month. Contented bovines, lounging around, endlessly chewing their cuds, the work of these benevolent milk-makers provides us with tasty and nutritious foodstuffs. Cows have great press, their image so "country" and wholesome that savvy marketers use cowhide spots to market everything from cheese to computers to wind-chimes.

If you believe all that peaceful, benevolent, bovine hype, you've probably never had to chase them at 2 a.m. after a thunderstorm downpour through tall, standing corn.

Make no mistake, if you work with cows in such a way that you have daily contact with them, you generally develop somewhat of an emotional tie with them. But, in a mental state akin to that of a mom stretched to the limit by mischievous, squabbly kids, there are days when I'd help load every one on the first truck to come down the road and back up to the barn.

Like one recent morning when I walked in under our old bank barn to feed the pen of heifers there, and nearly fell over my alleyway-cleanup rake. A few more steps revealed shovels and a pitchfork strewn on the floor like pickup sticks. Hay bales were knocked around and broken ones scattered across the floor. Predictably, the inevitable, tell-tale, organic "cow-calling-card" was liberally scattered among the litter.

Though no four-legged culprit was in sight, it was easy to piece together the plot. Some bred heifer or dry cow had found a loose spot in a fence or a gate not latched tight. Escapees inevitably end up at the calf nursery area, where buckets at each individual calf pen hold snacks of sweet calf feed. And from there, the door to the under-barn heifer pen had been a wide-open invitation.

It's not supposed to be. During cold and windy weather, the heavy, sliding metal door over the entrance is kept closed (except when someone forgets). Last summer, a small, door-sized gate turned up that was perfect for setting up across the doorway, allowing access by fresh air but not "varmits." The handy little gate vanished over the winter — and is temporarily being replaced by a wheelbarrow parked across the doorway.

Except when one of us forgets to put it back after feeding.

Our midnight prowlers not only make a mess under the barn, they sometimes make a side trip through the calf nursery, scattering more feed, more tools, more "calling cards," even occasionally dumping a bucket of milk left for the calves' breakfast bottles.

Fact is, if it can be chewed on, knocked over, butted against, pushed aside, rubbed into, kicked around, chewed up or licked at, some mischievous cow or manners-challenged heifer will find it. And if she can trash the total surroundings in the process, that bovine will be one happy camper.

In all fairness, most of our "girls" are relatively well-behaved, staying where they belong, respecting fences and gates, and just seemingly very contented cows, their needs all met by us servant humans. And even the most holy-terror-type heifers usually settle down once they join the milking string to become contributing, worthwhile, cow citizens.

So, as you gaze at herds of cows dotting area pastures, peacefully grazing in lush June grass, working daily that we might all enjoy our milk, butter, cheese, and ice cream with strawberries, look carefully to spot the inevitable troublemaker off in a corner, sniffing out an escape.

She's probably a cousin to some of ours.

Benefit Horse Show June 30 At Mason-Dixon Fairgrounds

DELTA (York Co.) — Plans are under way for the second annual Mason-Dixon Benefit Horse Show Sunday, June 30.

The show will begin at 8:30 a.m. (rain/shine) and all breeds are welcome. Entry fees will be $8 per class and proper show attire is required, as well as negative coggins.

There are 53 classes to include: halter, showmanship, English, Western and speed. The divisions are broken down as follows: leadline, walk-jog, beginner youth, youth, novice adult and adult.

In addition to the grand and reserve trophies given in the halter class, a high point trophy will be awarded for each division.

Premiums will be paid in every class on the day of the show. In addition each class' winner will receive a very special award. This event is APHA PAC approved.

This event will take place at the Mason-Dixon Fairgrounds on Route 74 and Route 165 in Delta, behind Allfirst Bank. The Delta-Cardiff Volunteer Fire Company will again be selling food and beverages. All proceeds will benefit the 2002 Mason-Dixon Fair.

Family Living Focus

Graduates Need A Family Tapestry

It is the custom of our church to allow the graduating high school seniors to give a presentation during a Sunday worship service in May. Last Sunday morning I had the opportunity to hear four high school students who will be graduating on June 6 give their presentations. The students presented their perspectives on how the church, friends, and family helped shape and mold them into the emerging adults that they have become.

Now if you are like me, I knew it would be a truly moving experience emotionally. After all, graduation definitely ranks right up near the top of the list for me emotionally. Given four young people who you've known almost all of their lives as well as their parents' lives, you can't help get choked up when they talk about their life experiences.

Coupled with the fact that one of the students was my nephew, I found it difficult seeing through a triple layer of balled up tissues and foggy tear-soaked contacts. I guess I hadn't realized until that moment that they had really "grown up" and were no longer the squirming young children "trying" to sit attentively in a pew each Sunday.

As a family educator, I always find it interesting to hear what young men and women consider the positive motivators have been in their lives. These four graduates weren't any different. They talked about their parents being involved in their lives through sports, academics, scouting, band, and other activities. Family members were cited as being supportive in times of self-doubt and when poor personal decisions had been made.

They also thanked the people in the congregation for taking time to be a part of activities like Bible School, camping, white water rafting, and caving. Their involvement showed their concern and commitment to help them become better-rounded individuals.

When my sons became teenagers, I often referred to them as "man cubs." They had one foot in manhood and one foot still under my wing. (As for myself, I was desperately clinging to each single feather stretching my wing further and further!)

Last Sunday morning each person in that congregation also lifted their wings to set these newly proclaimed young adult birds free. I, as well, saw my nephew now as a man, and what a good man he had become.

When you've been a part of young people's lives and shared experiences with them, you become a family member whether through blood or relationship. I like to think of it as a tapestry woven with each person representing a thread. This large 'family tapestry" provides the support and control in times of celebration and challenge. When a thread in the tapestry becomes weak, it is important for someone else to step in to offer support and strengthen the fabric. This also serves as a safety net.

If you have the opportunity to become involved in a young person's life through a volunteer organization, church, school, or just being the neighbor next door, remember even the smallest positive thing you do can make a difference. It is you who they will reflect upon as having been there to role model or offer words of advice and kindness.

It is important for other adults to become involved in children's lives and bring a new color to their tapestry. How do you let the bird out from under your wing? Provide children with the safety net of a tapestry made from love, guidance, positive life experiences, and the knowledge that people do care what becomes of them.

This is a gift we all can begin to give our graduates beginning when they are children. Graduation should be a time to celebrate a job well done by everyone.

Plants Can Be Started From Cuttings

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — For most backyard gardeners, the best way to start a plant is to drive to the nearest greenhouse and buy one. However, a scientist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says savvy plant lovers can save money and have fun by starting their own plants from cuttings.

"The reason plants can take root from cuttings is that each cell in the plant has all the genetic information necessary to produce a complete plant," explains Robert Berghage, associate professor of horticulture. "When a cutting is taken by snipping a portion of the plant stem, we are removing the connection between the stem and the roots."

As a result, the snipped plant has had its growth patterns disrupted. These changes in growth patterns are governed by plant hormones produced in the leaves, stems and roots of the plant.

Berghage explains that once a cutting is taken, the plant hormones no longer can travel back and forth between the roots and the stem. "That means there is a change in the balance of hormones within the cutting," Berghage says. "The hormonal change signals the plant to first heal the wound, and then replace the missing roots."

Berghage points out that the healing and rooting process takes time, and gardeners must be vigilant in caring for plant cuttings. "In its simplest form, cutting production means taking a snip of a plant stem, sticking it in some water, and letting it develop new roots," Berghage says.

Although some plants, such as geraniums, coleus, oleander and mint can be propagated using this method, Berghage explains that many other plants require a few more steps to get them to root.

Berghage advises (1) do not let the cutting dry out; (2) use a rooting hormone; (3) use a sterile, well-aerated and moist rooting medium; (4) provide high humidity and reduced light.

"Cover the cuttings with a plastic bag to provide high humidity," advises Berghage. "If you reduce light levels, just remember you must have enough light for the plant to grow."

Celebrate June Dairy Month With These 'Mooey' Delicious Recipes

girls have been promoters as dairy royalty representatives (with Jill being a past dairy princess). Gordon and I both have taken part in county extension educational programs and we have been involved in various cooperative leadership programs. Gordon serves on the corporate board of directors for Land O' Lakes.

I grew up in a small town in central Pennsylvania, so moving to a dairy farm was like culture shock. Farm life requires a lot of hard work and dedication — weekends and holidays, too! But it is a good life, and it enables us to teach our girls commitment and responsibility (along with some fun times). I feel proud to be a part of this country's backbone — the dairy industry.

IMPOSSIBLE QUICHE

3 eggs
½ cup biscuit mix
½ cup butter (or less)
1½ cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
¼ teaspoon chopped onion
½ cup ham (or crisp bacon or crab dash tabasco sauce

Blend together first six ingredients; add cheese and meat and pour into 10-inch greased baking pan.

My husband and I and the girls farmed for 40 years. We are now retired. How time changes through the years. We have four daughters, four grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

PEACH CHEESE CAKE

¾ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3¼ ounces vanilla pudding (not instant)
3 tablespoons butter
1 egg

Grease bottom of a 9 or 10-inch deep glass pie dish. Combine above ingredients in a large bowl, beat for two minutes at medium speed and then pour into prepared dish. Layer thinly-sliced peaches over above mixture (make sure peaches (about ¾ quart) are well drained and juice is saved.

Combine into small bowl:
½ cup sugar
8-ounce package cream cheese
3 tablespoons peach juice

Beat 2 minutes at medium speed. Spoon this mixture over peaches and keep within one inch of the dish's edge. Combine one tablespoon sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon and sprinkle over everything. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes or until golden brown. Be careful not to overcook.

My name is June Kocher and I look forward to reading the home section of Lancaster Farming every weekend. I live and work on a dairy farm in Pennsylvania Furnace with my husband, Rob, and four kids, David, Mandy, Matt, and Justin. I enjoy collecting antiques, flower gardening and painting animal portraits (especially cows) on canvas and slate. I am a leader of the Mt. Nittany 4-H Dairy club. I've been involved in 4-H and FFA since I was eight years old.

Justin Kocher, age 6, is the son of Rob and June Kocher, dairy farmers from Pennsylvania Furnace. He attends Ferguson Township Elementary School and enjoys farming with his father.

As a kid all I cared about were my cows and taking them to show. I still get that "showing bug" during the summer and fall months. I enjoy teaching 4-H members how to fit and show their own dairy animals. I was taught by outstanding 4-H leaders and FFA advisors so I feel I should pass the skills I've learned onto others. This recipes is one of my family's favorites. It is very refreshing during the hot summer months.

PEAS AND MACARONI CASSEROLE

3½ cups macaroni
1½ cups peas
½ pound hot dogs
½ pound velveeta cheese
1½ cups whole milk
¼ cup butter
½ teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon butter

Step 1: Cube hot dogs into kettle. Add peas and macaroni and enough water to rise one inch above this mixture. Bring to a boil and cook until hot dogs become puffy and macaroni soft. Stir in one tablespoon butter. Remove from heat and allow to steam in kettle while you prepare white sauce.

Step 2: Simmer onion and butter in frying pan until soft. Add ½ cup water saved from step one. Add milk, salts, and flour. Stir into a paste and cook over low heat until thick and smooth.

Step 3: Drain remaining water from peas/macaroni mixture. Pour into mixing bowl with white sauce, stirring until evenly mixed.

Step 4: Return to a large baking dish and heat at 350 degrees in oven for 45 minutes. Remove from heat and add cubed cheese. Allow to steam 10 minutes before serving to melt cheese. Stir before serving. Very "Yumalicious!"

This is a longtime family favorite of ours, well worth the time it takes to prepare it. I often make it Saturday and refrigerate it for a Sunday noon meal. When I do that, I omit step four. Then on Sunday morning I add an extra cup of milk to the casserole before I bake it 2½ hours at 275 degrees (approximately).

We live on a small dairy farm (38 stanchions) in eastern Lancaster County. A wonderful place to raise our children who need lots of space to "air their liveliness." A safe happy summer to you all!

ICE CREAM PIE

2 cups chopped pretzel sticks (use blender or grinder)
½ cup butter
1 quart ice cream
finely-chopped nuts (optional)

Add one stick of melted butter to two cups of pretzel crumbs and mix well. Press crumbs into an eight or nine-inch pie plate to form a crust. Do not be skimpy with crumbs, but reserve any left over crumbs for topping. Chill crust thoroughly in freezer to firmly set crust.

When crust is chilled and firm, gently an carefully spoon a quarter of your favorite flavor of ice cream into the prepared crust, being careful not to damage the pretzel shell. The ice cream should be softened to the consistency of light fluffy mashed potatoes.

Spread the ice cream completely over the shell out to the edges. Sprinkle any remaining crumbs, or finely-chopped nuts, on the top. Cover with plastic wrap and place in the freezer.

Remove the pie from the freezer about five minutes before serving and cut into wedges. Garnish with cherries, fresh fruit sauce, etc. This pie can be prepared many days ahead.

I am a widow and my late husband thoroughly enjoyed ice cream and pretzels and looked forward to this treat which could readily be found in our freezer. I have made this desert for many years and have had many requests for the recipe.

CHEESY HAM CHOWDER

10 bacon strips, diced
1 large onion, chopped
1 cup diced carrots
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
3 cups milk
1½ cups water
2½ cups cubed potatoes
15¼-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained
2 teaspoons chicken bouillon granules pepper to taste
3 cups shredded cheddar cheese
2 cups cubed fully-cooked ham

In a Dutch oven or large soup kettle, cook the bacon over medium heat until crisp. Remove to paper towels to drain. In the drippings saute onion and carrots until tender. Stir in flour until blended. Gradually add milk and water. Bring to a boil; cook and stir for two minutes or until thickened. Add the potatoes, corn, bouillon, and pepper. Reduce heat; simmer uncovered for 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Ad cheese and ham; heat until cheese is melted. Stir in bacon. Yield: 10 servings.

My husband and I live on a farmette on the outskirts of Shippensburg with our nine children. We have a hobby farm with some calves, chickens, goats, sheep, two dogs and one cat. We enjoy planting a garden and canning or freezing our produce from our garden. This chowder is good on a chilly damp day with homemade biscuits or rolls.

1 cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons salt
4 eggs
4 cups sugar
1 quart buttermilk
4 teaspoons baking soda
8 cups flour

Mix until smooth. Grease four to five loaf pans. Divide half of the batter into the loaf pans. Mix topping and divide into each loaf pan.

Topping
5 tablespoons cinnamon
1½ cups sugar

Add remaining batter on top, then swirl with a knife. Bake in 350-degree oven one hour.

Thanks to all the women who have sent in some great recipes over the years, I have some wonderful new recipes. It is a lot of fun when June comes. I hope you all enjoy this cinnamon bread. You can cut the recipe in half and the loaves freeze great.

GOOD MORNING MUFFINS

2 cups self-rising flour
1 cup minus 1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup half-and-half
½ cup canola oil
1 teaspoon lemon extract
2 eggs
1 cup fresh red raspberries

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Sift flour. Measure and add sugar. Beat together half-and-half, oil, lemon extract and eggs. Add dry ingredients; stir lightly to blend. Fold in raspberries. Fill 12 large paper-lined muffin cups three quarters full. Bake at 425 degrees for about 23 minutes or until muffins are golden brown. Cool five minutes before removing from pan. Makes 12 large muffins.

CREAM CHEESE FREEZE
Ice Cream

6 ounces softened cream cheese
⅔ cup sugar
2½ teaspoons vanilla
2 cups light cream

Cream together the cheese, sugar, and vanilla. Slowly add the cream, mixing thoroughly. Freeze in a one-quart refrigerator tray until firm. Break in chunks and beat with electric mixer until smooth, or freeze until partially frozen and beat until smooth with a rotary beater. Return to tray and freeze until firm. Makes six servings.

It boasts the "homemade" flavor and creamy smoothness of old-fashioned crank-style ice cream, but it's the simple refrigerator kind!

I have been married for 33 years to a wonderful man, Charles. We have a large garden and I freeze all my vegetables. I also make tomato juice, applesauce, homemade jellies, pumpkin and cherry pie, homemade buns, breads, cakes, and cookies.

I love contests. I put my hat, jellies, yellow cake, and knit bedspread in the Kempton Fair and got first place on all my things.

We make outdoor and indoor furniture which includes cedar chests, clothes trees, gliding chairs, rocking horses and rocking cows, rocking chairs, bean bag games, and small benches.

Charles and I work together in the shop. He makes the furniture and I stain and varnish the furniture.

PEACH DESSERT

1⅓ cup graham cracker crumbs
¼ cup sugar
⅓ cup melted butter

Press first three ingredients in 9x13-inch pan and chill.

8 ounces cream cheese
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup scalded milk, cooled
8 ounces whipped topping

Beat together and spread over graham cracker crust. Top with fresh sliced peaches. Mix together:

⅔ cup orange jello
1½ cup boiling water
½ cup cold water
14 ice cubes

Pour over dessert and chill until set.

We live on a farm and milk 40 cows. I enjoy helping my husband with the chores, especially in the winter after being in the house most of the day.

Our 20-month old daughter, Christine, likes it in the barn, too, especially with the baby calves. We enjoy Lancaster Farming and I always look forward to the June issues.

BLENDER PUMPKIN PIE

1 cup milk
½ cup cream
1 cup brown sugar
1¼ cups cooked pumpkin
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs
9-inch pie shell

Put filling ingredients into blender in order given. Beat until smooth. Pour into unbaked pie shell. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until done. Serve with whipped cream or ice cream.

This pumpkin pie is a family favorite and it's easy to make. With three boys and three girls to help eat it, it sure doesn't last long!

We don't live on a farm but have a big garden and raise our own chickens for meat.

ICE CREAM

1 cup milk
2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup water
1¼ cups sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vanilla
4 eggs
¼ cup sugar
3 cups whole milk
2 cups cream

Heat but do not boil the cup milk. Add the gelatin that was soaked in ¼ cup water. Add sugar, salt and vanilla.

Beat eggs and ¼ cup sugar. Pour whole milk into gelatin mixture. Add egg mixture and cream. Freeze in a four quart freezer.

This ice cream gets harder for me than some other recipes.

The Better Life

Last Saturday night I went with a friend to see the movie, World Traveler. It is a story about a man who is struggling with personal responsibility and commitment.

Some persons would think this man has it all. He has the looks of a movie star and is successful in his career as an architect. He has a beautiful wife and son who adore him. But one day, in the midst of preparations for his son's birthday party, he walks out the door, leaving only a note.

He gets in his car and begins to drive.

At his first stop, the man purchases a key chain with a small globe attached, makes a small mark on the globe to show his son where he is traveling and sends it to him for a birthday present. As he travels westward across the United States, the man struggles with his past and present behaviors, encountering situations and persons who bring back images of his wife and son and his past life.

His travels lead him to a log home in the hills of Oregon. The viewer soon realizes he knows this place. It is his father's home. He had visited it as a small boy in the summer, until he was old enough to realize it wasn't just a summer place and that his father was not a world traveler. His own dad had walked out on him and his mother when he was a young child. Now he was doing the same thing to his family.

Searching for answers and trying to understand his own behavior, he asks his father, "Why did you do this?" The father thinks for a moment, shrugs his shoulders and says, "I guess I was looking for a better life."

After the brief visit with his father, the man realizes that he has "the better life," not his father. He returns to New York hoping it is still there. When he enters the home, his son welcomes him with a big hug, just like he was never gone. But guess what the little son was clutching in his hands as he hugged his dad? The key chain with the little blue globe!

This is a story had a happy ending. Unfortunately, every night one out of every three children in our country go to sleep in a home without their biological father. Research shows that father absence is associated with numerous social problems including youth crime, teen pregnancy, a decrease in educational achievement and poverty.

If you are a dad and are choosing the "better life," give yourself a pat on the back for your commitment to stay involved in your child's life. If you know other dads who are committed to the "better life," give them a pat on the back, too. It does make a difference.

As those TV public service announcements sponsored by the National Fatherhood Initiative acclaim, "It takes a man to be a dad."

Pennsylvania is one of the first states to establish a Fatherhood Initiative to increase public awareness of the importance of fathers in children's lives, to reconnect dads with their children, and to strengthen the relationships between fathers, their children, and their families. If you would like information about this program, call 1-866-MY-PA-DAD (1-866-697-2323).

Dads are important!

Lancaster Extension Offers Workshops For All Interests

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Register now for any of the following Better Kid Care workshops in May and June 2002.

Workshops are designed for all caregivers of young children — parents, grandparents and others are also welcome to attend.

For more information, contact Debra Naumann at the Lancaster County Penn State Cooperative Extension office at (717) 394-6851.

Child Care For Mixed Age

This is a great workshop for family home providers or those who work with mixed-age groups of children. You'll learn new ideas for activities and spaces that can accommodate a wide range of age groups. Ways to involve older children in teaching younger ones will be shared, as well as safety considerations for mixed age groups.

Instructor: Debra Naumann, Family Strengths
Cost: $5
Date: Wednesday, June 26
Time: 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

Financial Planning For Retirement: Getting An Early Start

Do you have big dreams but little savings for retirement? Maybe you haven't even thought about it yet.

It is never too early to start planning for your financial security in retirement. Even if you delayed getting started, there are things you can do to reclaim time.

Learn about setting goals, calculating retirement needs, determining appropriate investments, and understanding risk.

Instructor: Robert J. Thee, Ph.D., CFP, Extension Agent, Housing and Financial Management
Date: Thursdays, June 6 and 13
Time: 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

Mutual Funds: Getting A Start

If you are a participant in a retirement fund that offers mutual funds or if you are looking to invest for other purposes, this workshop will offer an opportunity to learn about types of mutual funds, researching and selecting a fund, reading a prospectus, and understanding fund volatility, fees and other expenses, and asset allocation strategies.

Instructor: Robert J. Thee, Ph.D, CFP, Extension Agent, Housing and Financial Management
Date: Mondays, June 10 and 17
Time: 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

Heirloom Sewing Workshops

A deadline for registration has been included for the heirloom sewing classes since special supplies need to be ordered and kits assembled. No refunds or cancellations can be made after the registration deadline.

Ribbons And Roses

Watch roses come alive under your fingertips as the workshop shows how to embellish a knit shirt with a cascade of dimensional silk ribbon flora woven through with a ribbon bow. This silk ribbon embroidered shirt will make a beautiful addition to your summer wardrobe.

Some silk ribbon embroidery knowledge is useful although the basic stitches will be demonstrated. Supply list: knit shirt, embroidery scissors, washout marking pen, embroidery hoop.

Saturday, June 8
Time: 9 a.m.-noon
Class Limit: Min. 4, Max. 15
Fee: $28 (includes kit with all silk ribbon, floss, needles, and stitch diagram)
Student needs to provide the shirt
(No refunds or cancellation made after the deadline)
Instructor: Kristi Elkner

Beginning English Smocking Classes

In this class, the student will learn the basics of English Smocking — preparation, stem/outline stitch, cable stitch, wave and trellis stitches, starting and stopping and how to read smocking patterns.

The basic mechanics of pleating will be demonstrated by the instructor. The student will practice on a prepleated sampler and will make a smocked sampler. Going from smocking to construction will be discussed.

This is a handwork class. Supply list: embroidery scissors, optional: additional task lighting and extension cord.

Beginning English Smocking

Friday, July 12

Tour Shippensburg Gardens June 9

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — The 16th annual Shippensburg Garden Tour will feature quite a variety of garden settings. As always, the tour will highlight a number of different type gardens which will be of interest to a wide variety of tour-goers.

In addition to the four gardens in Shippensburg, this year's tour includes gardens rarely seen in this area. Two of the gardens, located in the Greencastle area, are on the tour at the owners' invitation.

One of the gardens claims more than 40,000 annuals planted each year in beautifully designed gardens, a building to accommodate 7,800 persons, and beautiful gardens and ponds — a perfect setting for 25 weddings planned for that site this year. The other garden in that area is also unique, featuring 51 flower beds with a wide variety of annuals, bulbs, and shrubbery. A wooded area, a pool, ponds, shade gardens, and more formal gardens will be intriguing to those who attend.

A plant sale will be featured, free refreshments will be served, and entertainment will be provided by the Shippensburg German Band.

Cost for this year's tour will be $6 in advance, $8 on the day of the tour, and students, $2.50. Tickets will be available from the church members of Christ U.M. Church, at the church during morning hours from 9 a.m.-noon, Monday-Friday. Tickets will also be available at Criders' Meats on Old Scotland Road, Shippensburg, East Meets West and Edwards' Mercantile in downtown Shippensburg, or for information or tickets call Rose Dillner at (717) 532-8155.

Checks should be made out to Christ U.M. Church Garden Tour and be enclosed with a 34-cent stamp for each ticket booklet ordered.

Tour includes:

Shippensburg Peace Garden

About 10 years ago, Pauline Underwood, a lifelong proponent for universal peace, envisioned a community garden dedicated to peace and the preservation of the earth. When the Park and Recreation Department granted the land for the garden, two grants have been received and the present landscape design has developed.

A wide variety of specimen trees, roses, and shrubs are included in the beautiful color scheme of deep reds, pinks and silvery whites chosen for the garden. Visitors to the garden tour will have the opportunity to ask Master Gardeners, who will be present at this site, about the various trees and shrubs.

New additions include a Nine-Bark "Diablo," "Forest Pansy" Redbud, and Viburnum "Onondaga," A peaceful place to visit anytime you are in Shippensburg, but especially today when you can learn about the plantings.

Mervin And Esther Carver
25 Stewart Place
Shippensburg, PA 17257

(The plant sale will be at this site.)

The Carver yard was on the tour six years ago.

This is an example of a shade garden with a wide variety of perennials grown here. A small lily pond acts as a centerpiece for the various beds and flowering trees. Herbs are of special interest and are included in the plantings.

Bob And Mary Heefner
3 Mainsville Road
Shippensburg, PA 17257

(Refreshments and the German band will be at this site.)

It is not a surprise to find out that Esther Carver (Garden 2) is Mary Heefner's sister. The entire family are avid gardeners. Mary's garden was also on the tour six years ago. The Heefner garden has a tremendous selection of bulbs, plants, and ornamental grasses. Mary arranges flowers at Weis Market (Cressler's Marketplace) and her eye for coordinating designs and colors flows into her garden. She has added another mini garden and a miniature rose garden.

Les And Es Martin
900 Olde Scotland Road
Shippensburg, PA 17257

This unique wooded site is beautiful. It will be a pleasure for you to see what lies beyond the bridge you cross to get to this location. The pool and patio are located behind the house. The front yard area includes the wooded area and is quaintly decorated with Es' creativity.

This property nestles right into this location and utilizes the natural landscape with their own.

Jerry And Arlene Martin
1032 Buchanan Trail East
(Rt. 16 E)
Greencastle, PA 17225

Just 1.1 miles off of Rt. 81 south at exit 5, you will make a startling discovery. This amazing site will cater to 25 weddings this year and there are 40,000 flower plants arranged into designs and patterns throughout the 18-acre site.

Rev. Merle And Beulah Cordell
8979 Grindstone Hill Road
Chambersburg, PA 17201

Located near the Martin property, this is an amazing display of blooming color. It is a result of years of nurturing plant cuttings, storing favorite canna bulbs, and buying needed plants to fill 51 flower beds. Last year the Cordells shared their garden with more than 1,000 visitors.

ANSWER — Here is a recipe for shoo-fly pie and crust and a poem sent in by Alta Sensenig, Newville, in honor of her mother. Alta writes that she hopes and trusts that she too can one day teach her children the wonderful art of cooking.

Mamma's Recipes

Mamma's the finest cook on earth,
She told me long ago,
Bread's no good unless you add
Some loving to the dough.
and when you're baking pies, she said,
"A pinch of faith and trust,
If added to the shortening
Makes a flaky, tender crust."
Compassion by the spoonful
In the batter of a cake
Makes it come out light and fluffy
And the finest you can make.
Now these things canot be purchased
In the store across the way,
But Mamma keeps them in her heart
And uses them each day.

Wet-Bottom Shoo-Fly Pie

1 cup flour
¾ cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon shortening
1 cup molasses
1 egg
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup hot water

Combine flour, brown sugar, salt, and shortening until crumbly. Save ¾ cup crumbs for topping. Combine baking powder and hot water. Add remaining ingredients. Pour into unbaked pie sheel. Top with ¾ cup reserved crumbs. Makes one pie. Bake 10 minutes at 375 degrees. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake an additional 30 minutes.

Flaky Pie Crust

1⅓ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup shortening
3 tablespoons milk or cold water

Combine dry ingredients. Cut in shortening. Add milk.

This is the family's favorite shoo-fly recipe. For variety, add 1 teaspoon vanilla, a dash of nutmeg and cinnamon. Add 1 cup nuts to the crumbs for topping.

ANSWER — Rhoda Conover, Gettysburg, sent in this recipe for homemade noodle dough.

Homemade Noodle Dough

2¼-2½ cups flour
2 eggs
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon oil
1 teaspoon salt
⅓ cup water

Combine ingredients in food processor and process a few minutes or mix by hand. Knead. Let rest 30 minutes. Roll out dough and cut into ⅜-¼-inch strips with pizza or pastry cutter. Cook as desired.

ANSWER — Betty Smith, West Chester, sends in this recipe for making peach butter. Grape butter is made the same way she writes. She has been using this quick and easy method for years.

Peach Butter

Wash, pit, and quarter 1½ dozen ripe peaches. Skin may be left on. Add a little water to bottom of pan. Cook until soft. Put through food mill. Use:

5 cups fruit pulp
7½ cups sugar
½ pouch Certo

Put fruit into large pan, add sugar, and mix well. Bring to a full rolling boil, boil hard one minute. Remove from heat, stir in Certo. Skim off foam. Ladle into jars and seal.

Extension Workshop For Child Care Providers

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — "Child Care For Mixed Ages" is the title of the workshop being presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension at 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thurs., June 6 at the center, 601 Westtown Road, Suite 370, in West Chester.

Trudy Dougherty, family living agent, said, "child care providers will get ideas on how to make caring for children of different ages work. They will discuss some of the problems that arise when caring for children in a mixed age group."

For more information on the program, support materials, and other services from the "Better Kid Care Program," call Trudy Dougherty at (610) 696-3500. Visit the Better Kid Care Website at www.betterkidcare.psu.edu.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Recently I looked through a scrapbook of postcards. They were not especially old cards, but some were interesting.

Many were simply pictures of Niagara Falls. Others were of banks or churches in this county. The ones with messages on the back were most entertaining.

A lot of them were sent to a great uncle of mine. He was a bachelor and I didn't realize the number of places that he had lived. Many cards only signed with initials and so could not be identified, while others were from people that I knew.

My mother-in-law saved their cards from 1905 to 1915 and often the short messages on the back were important. As they had no telephones, a "meet me at the trolley Friday night" was important. Often an invitation to a Sunday meal was the message on the back. There were a few seasonal cards for holidays, too, but most were quite businesslike.

Often people had pictures of their homes or farms put on a postcard. These were then mailed to friends. Of course, if they traveled to the seashore or mountains, they sent pictures on cards to relatives. Local scenes of swimming holes, train wrecks, or parks are also of interest today.

Collecting postcards is an interesting hobby for many people and clubs have been formed that meet regularly. Unusual cards are often sold or traded. They have historical value and can show us how cities looked long ago. Automobiles in a picture certainly date the card. Even the dress of people tells us what era they were printed.

Of course, I should not open a scrapbook of postcards when there is work to be done, as I could spend hours just "looking."

Fourth Graders Redeem Real Seals For Pizza

Fourth-graders at Schaefferstown Elementary School won a school contest sponsored by Lebanon County Dairy Promotion Committee. In exchange for collecting the most real seals — 2,433 — the class received a pizza. Eight large pizzas were required to fill the appetites of the 4th graders.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — "Look for the real seal — your assurance of real dairy food," Lebanon County Dairy Princess Amy Moyer told students at Schaefferstown Elementary School.

The dairy princess and her royalty, Dairy Maids Chanelle, Horst, Janelle Zimmerman, and Jessica Bross, and Little Dairy Miss Louise Krall recently visited the school to tell students about the importance of a balanced diet, and especially how milk makes strong bones and teeth. They even made chocolate pudding to show them how easy it is to make a quick, nutritious snack.

Some fakes have infiltrated the grocery stores — products imitating dairy products but without the nutritional goodness. To help students discern real dairy products from the fakes, the royalty team showed them a "real seal." The real seal is a symbol of a milk drop with the capitalized letters REAL in the center. This seal should appear on the containers of all real dairy products.

To encourage the students to look for the Real seal, the Lebanon County Dairy Promotion team promised a pizza party to the class that collected the most real seals.

The 246 students searched for the symbol on products in their home and in the grocery cart. They clipped out the seals and brought stacks of the seals to be counted.

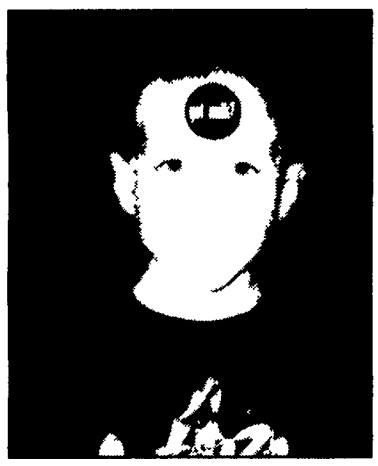
In the end, fourth graders had collected more seals than the grades from kindergarten through fifth. Fourth graders had collected 2,433 seals. That's a lot of seals. A large percentage of them were brought in by three students: Twin brothers Tyler and Brock Cromleigh and Janice Brandt. The trio said they couldn't have done it without their moms. The twins said their mom works in a hospital and Janice's mom works at a restaurant. Their moms ask coworkers to bring in real seals for the contest.

Competition was stiff. Every class wanted to win the pizza party, but only one could be declared the winner. Lucky for fourth graders, they won!

The Lebanon County Dairy Promotion Cow alias Cheryl Horst delivered eight large pizzas to the school. Helping serve the pizzas were Lebanon County Dairy Princess Amy Moyer and Dairy Maid Chanelle Horst.

Chanelle is now a 10th grader in high school, but Schaefferstown was the school she attended during her elementary years. Chanelle said it was lots of fun to come back to school to serve pizza instead of study. Each year the kindergarten class visits her family's dairy farm.

M'mm good!



Noah Ginder, 7, asks a question without moving his lips!

Zany Fun For Dairy Promoters

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — The annual Rhubarb Fest conducted at Kitchen Kettle Village, Intercourse, is always a bit zany but this year, the event was also freezing. But Lancaster County Dairy Princess Ann Fisher and her court braved the windy, cold weather May 18 to hand out 500 mini ice cream cones and assorted dairy-related stuff.

Lancaster County Dairy Princess Ann Fisher (wearing a tiara) and her court hand out dairy-related gifts, recipes, and mini ice cream cones to more than 500 people attending the Rhubarb Fest, Intercourse.

The stuff included promotional items such as cow-decor pencils, stickie notes, tablets, recipes, and information on the value of drinking milk.

Assisting the dairy princess were dairy ambassadors April and Angela Becker, Cheryl Hershey, and Marcy Zeng. The following dairy maids also helped: Caitlyn and Olivia Ursery and Adriane Ranck.

People from all over the world attended the event, which is famous for his rhubarb pie baking contest, the world's only rhubarb race car derby, rhubarb arcade games, and lots of musical entertainment.

Turkey Hill's dairy cow does her part in convincing kids to drink milk and eat ice cream.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Or, you may e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@inpnews.com

Please clarify what question you are answering when responding.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

ANSWER — In answer to the request about the Walck grain cradle, Bonnie Shockey, president of Allison-Antrim Museum, Greencastle, sent the following information: The grain cradle was made by Henry Stickell Walck in his shop at Canebrake (not even of village size) about two miles east of Greencastle off the Leitersburg Pike. Walck made cradles from 1863-1926. The business was sold to a Mr. Lesher in 1926 who operated the business until 1939. In the early 1980s, Lesher's son, Ira, gave all the Walck grain cradle manufacturing equipment to Tayamentasachta, Center for Environmental Studies, which is part of the Greencastle-Antrim School District.

The grain cradle was used to cut fields of wheat. An experienced person could cut a couple of acres of grain a day with the grain cradle. Walck also made hay rakes and hay forks.

More information, including an interview with H.S. Walck with one of his granddaughters, Virginia Fitz, can be found on Allison-Antrim Museum's Web site at www.greencastlemuseum.org.

ANSWER — Kitty Legge, Ulster, wanted to know how to obtain a penpal from Scotland. Bonnie Shockey, Greencastle, suggests she contact someone at the Ulster Historical Foundation. Bonnie believes that Kitty's hometown Ulster, Pa., was more than likely settled by the Ulster Scots (Scot-Irish) who immigrated from Northern Ireland. They were not Irish but descendants of the Scots, who were enticed to move to Northern Ireland by King James I in the early 17th century. The Scots were of the Presbyterian faith. Although Kitty said that she does not have a computer, she can ask someone to help her use the computer at a local library and through that contact the Ulster Historical Foundation at www.uhf.org.uk. More information on the Ulster Scots can also be found at the Web site www.greencastlemuseum.org.

My husband feeds 180-200 cattle and farms 110 acres of corn, barley, and soybeans. We have a flock of 7,000 breeder chickens. Marlin also hauls produce over the growing season for a neighbor.

The farm is a nice place for children to grow up on. Laura, 12; Charlotte, 10; Benjamin, 6; and Jacob, 2 can walk after Dad. They also take care of guinea pigs and goats or go horseback riding and gather eggs to eat.

It reminds me of a song my mother use to sing to me when I was a child.

"The country boy, the country girl; They are the best to stand a test; In any public world. They live a life of usefulness. Their labor's full of joy. All hail the country boy and girl!

May the Lord be thanked; for He has given us all things richly to enjoy.

MOM'S CHEESE POTATOES

2 quarter cooked, peeled, and shredded potatoes
1 stick butter
2½ cups milk, divided
½ pound velveeta cheese
1 medium onion, quartered
¾ teaspoon salt
dash pepper

Note: When you cook potatoes, cook them to shred — not too soft.

In a large saucepan over low heat combine butter and one cup milk. Add cheese slowly, several slices at a time, stirring constantly until melted. Put remaining 1½ cups milk in the blender with an onion and blend until fine. Add to cheese mixture. Add salt and pepper. Pour warm cheese sauce over potatoes and stir just until mixed. Put into a greased three-quart casserole dish and bake, covered, slowly at 325 degrees for 1½ hours.

This is a simple but delicious recipe my mom made often for company. Since I'm married I have relied on this recipe for company quite often myself. We have two little boys ages three years and nine months. I love trying new recipes and have clipped many from the B section of Lancaster Farming.

VEGETABLE PIE

2 cups chopped fresh or frozen broccoli or sliced fresh or frozen cauliflower
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1½ cups milk
¼ cup bisquick
3 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Note: Frozen broccoli or cauliflower must be thawed and drained, but not cooked.

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Lightly grease a glass pie plate, approximately 10 inches. Heat one inch salt water to boiling. Add broccoli or cauliflower. Cover and heat to boiling. Cook until almost tender, about five minutes. Drain thoroughly. Mix broccoli, onion, green pepper, and cheese in pie plate. Beat remaining ingredients until smooth. Pour into pie plate. Bake until golden brown, 35 to 40 minutes. Let stand five minutes before cutting. Makes six servings.

I usually make two of these pies to take along to reunions or family picnics.

My husband Fred and I are in partnership with my brother Bob in the dairy. We own three farms, have 80 milk cows, raise our own replacement heifers, and also raise our bull calves for steers, plus rent 25 acres. We have three children: Kimberly, 26; Kevin, 21; and Kadie, 17. Kevin works on the farm full-time and our daughters help when time permits.

STRAWBERRY DESSERT

2 cups crushed strawberries
2 packs instant vanilla pudding
2 cups milk
2 packs strawberry jello
1 container whipped topping

Dissolve jello in two cups boiling water. Cool. Mix milk with the pudding. Combine all the ingredients with the jello. Beat with mixer or by hand. Pour into two serving dishes. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

COCONUT FRUIT DIP

8 ounces crushed unsweetened pineapple, undrained
¼ cup milk
½ cup sour cream
3.4 ounces instant coconut cream pudding mix fresh pineapple, grapes, strawberries, or other fruit

Mix the first four ingredients about one minute or until smooth. Serve in refrigerator.

My family and I live on a farm in Middleburg. My husband and I custom raise replacement dairy heifers and our two boys, Aaron, 11, and Jared, 9, enjoy showing the dairy heifers they have as 4-H projects.

MICROWAVE CARAMEL CORN

1 stick melted butter
1 cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup light corn syrup
½ teaspoon baking soda
4 quarts popped corn (air popped works best)

Add brown sugar, salt, and corn syrup to melted butter in a 2-quart microwave safe bowl. Bring to a boil in microwave on high heat. Boil for two minutes on high setting, stirring after one minute of boiling.

Stir in baking soda until foamy. Stir mixture and pour on popped corn that has been placed in a clean, brown paper grocery bag. Shake. Place closed bag in microwave and cook 1½ minutes at high setting. Shake or stir with long wooden spoon. Close bag and microwave on high for 1½ minutes longer. Shake or stir and place on sheets to cool.

This is an easy way to make caramel corn. The brown paper grocery bag makes cleanup a breeze. I prefer this recipe to any baked caramel corn I've tried.

POTATO CHEESE SOUP

8 medium diced potatoes
2 sliced carrots
2 sliced celery stalks
1 small chopped onion
8 ounces softened cream cheese
¼ cup butter
10¾ ounce can cream of chicken soup
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 bacon strips, fried and crumbled

Place potatoes, carrots, celery, and onion in a six-quart kettle. Cook until tender.

Mix cream cheese, butter, and chicken soup. Stir well. Add milk, salt, pepper, and bacon. Add to cooked vegetables and heat thoroughly. For thicker soup drain vegetables before adding cream cheese mixture. Enjoy.

We enjoy farm life very much — all 11 of us! My name is Clara Martin. I'm 20 years old. My four brothers are Marcus, 25; Carl, 22; Andy, 13; and Noah, 11. My four sisters are Mabel, 17; Ruth Ann, 15; Sara Ella, 9; and Alma, 7.

We live on a 110-acre dairy farm and have 65 cows, five horses, and one pony. We also raise our own heifers.

Summer is a wonderful time of the year for us, but also a very busy time!

PEACH ICE CREAM

1½ quarts scalded milk
3 packages unflavored gelatin
½ cup water
3 cups sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 pints cream
2 cans evaporated milk
3 tablespoons vanilla
¾ cup crushed fresh peaches

Heat milk, then soften gelatin in water. Add to hot milk. Add sugar and salt. Cool, but do not let it congeal before adding cream and vanilla. Freeze in a six quart freezer. When it is ready, add the peaches and mix for a minute longer.

We really like this recipe and sometimes will add fresh crushed peaches on top just before serving. I have also used raspberries or strawberries instead of peaches, which are also delicious.

My husband, Ferlin, and I live on a 129-acre farm and milk 60 cows. We have two children, Glendon, 3, and Kaitlyn, 5 months.

I hope you'll enjoy this recipe!

PUMPKIN PIE

1 cup pumpkin
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons flour
3 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
3 cups milk

Mix pumpkin, flour, sugars, spices, and salt. Add egg yolks, mix well and add milk. Fold in beaten egg whites. Put in pie shells and bake at 350 degrees until firm, about 35-50 minutes. Yields two pies.

This is a recipe my family really likes. I usually make four pies at a time. Glenn and I have four boys: Darryl, 15; Brian, 11; Anthony, 8; and Clyde, 4, and live on a dairy farm. We also have a lime and fertilizer business. We drink and use a lot of milk, about one gallon a day.

Linda Zimmerman
Lititz

ICE CREAM DESSERT

½ gallon ice cream (we use French vanilla)
2 boxes vanilla instant pudding
½ cup milk

Mix together and refrigerate ½ hour.

60 Ritz crackers
½ cup melted butter

Mix together and press into 9X13-inch pan. Put ice cream mixture on top of cracker crumb mixture. Top with a small container of whipped topping.

My family loves this recipe and it is so easy to make. Our children, Colby, 11; Lindsay, 9; and Kelsey, 7, love to try new recipes and this is a favorite. My husband has an excavating business and I have a daycare in our home in Newville, but I grew up on a farm and really miss all the old ways. I am trying to teach our children about cooking, canning, gardening, etc. Thank you for a great paper, we all enjoy it!

Miss Congeniality Reviews Year As Lancaster County Dairy Princess

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

GAP (Lancaster Co.) — Anne Fisher is the friendliest, most-outgoing dairy princess in the state. That's what 30 of her peers decided when they selected her as Miss Congeniality at the state pageant last year.

Of that award, Anne said, "I was shocked. I consider myself friendly but not the person who would be the first to talk with others."

This past year has definitely honed Anne's communication skills. She's been many places and met many people through dairy promotions, and talks with ease to both individuals and crowds. No doubt that's what her peers saw in her—the ability to put others at ease without the pretense to impress.

The 18-year-old also has a new appreciation for dairy farmers and dairy products. That came as a result of a mission trip to Mexico.

Anne explained that in Mexico, few places have access to pasteurized milk. So, for 10 days, this self-proclaimed "big dairy consumer" was deprived of milk. When she was given a glass of milk on the 10th day, Anne said, "It was the most wonderful milk I've ever tasted."

That experience gave Anne a new appreciation for the opportunity the U.S. citizen affords to have a glass of milk or an ice cream cone whenever desired.

"I no longer take dairy farmers and dairy products for granted," Anne said.

Unlike most dairy princesses, Anne doesn't live on a farm. But she does have a connection to the dairy industry. Her dad is part owner of Fisher and Thompson, a dairy equipment company.

Because she isn't immersed in dairy farming everyday, she sometimes felt at a disadvantage among the farming community because ag terminology isn't always familiar to her. But promoting dairy products and the health benefits connected to it comes quite easy for her.

"I've always been a big user of dairy products," she said.

Anne heard about the dairy princess program through a friend whose family was active in dairy promotion. The Gordon Hoover family encouraged her to compete in the county pageant.

At first, Anne declined because she didn't consider herself a pageant person. But being a "people person," the opportunity to help with promotions appealed to her. She decided to participate just to have fun. She expected to serve as an alternate and thought she could handle that responsibility.

When she was crowned county dairy princess, she felt a bit overwhelmed. "But the committee did a great job. They really helped and clued me in to what I needed to know and do," Anne said.

Although most promotion is done in the county, Anne also helps with major events throughout the state. One event was Walk for Hunger, conducted in Philadelphia. Anne handed out yogurt and chocolate milk to the participants. She also needed to wear a cow costume and lead the crowd in some exercises. The bulky cow costume hung loosely on her.

Later many people remarked that the cow looked so skinny, which resulted in Anne being nicknamed the "One Percent Cow."

Anne lives with her parents Amos and Jane in a wooded area known as the Welsh Mountains. She has two sisters, Samantha, 16, and Brooke, 13, and a brother Shawn, called Buddy, 10.

Anne will soon graduate from Conestoga Christian School. She plans to take off a year before college to determine the direction she wants to go career-wise. That doesn't mean she'll be sitting around. Instead, she is taking emergency medical training (EMT) courses this summer, she will assist a photographer, and she has a couple things lined up to work with kids.

All these jobs are possible considerations for a career.

She believes the EMT training will help her decide whether she should seek a career in the medical field. Anne enjoys watching operations on television and she is fascinated with biology and human anatomy studies.

"I guess you could say I love blood and guts," Anne said. While family members and friends recoil from watching operations on television, Anne is fascinated with the process.

After photography courses at school, Anne has been encouraged by a teacher who noticed Anne's aptitude for photo composition. The teacher recognizes Anne's talent and is pushing her in that direction.

Anne also enjoys working with children. She compiled a scrapbook of pictures she took of children. "People fascinate me," she said.

In school, Anne is involved in soccer, basketball, tennis, drama, and choir. She also plays handbells and piano. She's taken gymnastic classes for six years and spends a lot of time doing homework.

"Sometimes I feel my workload is too big, but now I see that almost everything is going to end at the same time," Anne said of high school graduation that brings her involvement in so many activities to an end. Her reign as dairy princess will end June 22 when she crowns her successor.

This realization gives Anne a fresh perspective. She said, "I'm trying to enjoy every minute of everything I have to do."

Her nonfarming friends take an interest in her dairy princess activities and are very supportive. Anne said she believes her involvement in dairy promotion has increased her peers' appreciation for dairy farming and the industry.

Anne said, "This past year has been an experience of my lifetime. I thank Jesus, who has brought me through the whole year. It's a blessing to have Jesus' help in my life."

Lancaster County Dairy Princess Ann Fisher, voted Miss Congeniality by the 30 other dairy princesses representing their counties at the state pageant, always likes an excuse to enjoy an ice cream cone.

Lancaster County Dairy Princess Anne Fisher, center, with parents Amos and Jane Fisher at home in Gap. Anne said her interest in the dairy industry perked when she was little. "I remember how I loved to accompany my dad to dairy farms when he was on call and needed to fix milking equipment," Anne said in reference to her dad's part ownership in Fisher and Thompson, a dairy equipment company.

Milk Consumption May Reduce Obesity, Diabetes Risks

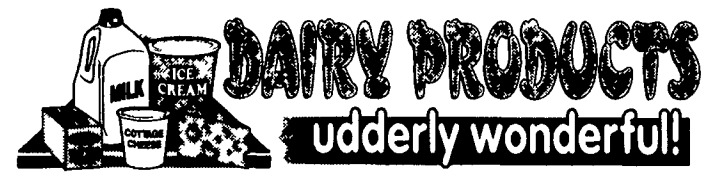
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A new study published recently in the Journal of the American Medical Association suggests that young adults who consume more dairy products, such as milk, cheese and yogurt, may be less likely to become obese and develop the insulin resistance syndrome (IRS), a key risk factor for type 2 diabetes and heart disease. These findings are consistent with a growing body of research that demonstrates dairy's role in reducing the risk of obesity and chronic diseases.

The researchers looked at the eating patterns of 3,157 African American and Caucasian young adults, both male and female over a 10-year period. Two comprehensive food intake reports were averaged — one taken at the start of the study and one taken seven years later — to determine participants' habitual intake of dairy products and other foods.

The results showed that overweight individuals, regardless of race or sex, who consumed more dairy products had a lower risk of developing IRS. While overweight individuals typically consumed fewer dairy products than their normal-weight counterparts, those who consumed the most dairy products had a 71 percent lower incidence of IRS than those who consumed the fewest dairy products. In addition, those who consumed more dairy foods were more likely to have healthier eating habits overall with higher intakes of whole grains, fruits and vegetables, and lower intakes of sugar-sweetened soft drinks.

"We've known for some time that adding more dairy foods, such as milk, cheese and yogurt, may help reduce the risk of high blood pressure, osteoporosis and possibly even colon cancer," said Amy Mobley, a registered dietitian for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. "We can now add dairy foods to the list of helping to control weight and reducing the risk of heart disease and type 2 diabetes."

The researchers say that the decrease in milk and dairy product consumption over the past few decades, accompanied by an increase of soda consumption and snacking among children and teens, may play an important role in the current epidemics of obesity and type 2 diabetes, as well as in the increase in heart disease rates.



Springton Manor Farm In Chester County Open To Public

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — The public is invited to experience a "world of wonder" for all ages at Springton Manor Farm, a 300-acre county park, classified as a working farm.

The site is open every day of the week for people to explore the barnyard, enjoy hiking trails, picnic by the pond, or a hayride as part of your Springton Manor Farm adventure.

At Springton Manor Farm, visitors can see the elegant, Springton Manor House, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. It is available for weddings, business meetings, family gatherings, class reunions, and other special celebrations. Wedding ceremonies may be held outdoors in the perennial garden, with the reception flowing through and around the Victorian Manor House.

This summer, Springton Manor Farm will also be presenting the program entitled Once Upon A Haywagon. Visitors can enjoy a haywagon tour of the park, as the park ranger discusses the historical, cultural and natural significance of the beautiful park sites. This program is scheduled for Sat., Aug. 10 at 10 a.m. Program space is limited. Call the park at (610) 942-2450 to register. The program is free.

For more information on park facilities, Manor House rentals, events or programs, call the park office at (610) 942-2450 or visit www.chesco.org/ccparks. Springton Manor Farm is located five miles west of Downingtown, off Route 322 in Guthriesville.

New Roots Key To Healthy Plants

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When planting new trees, shrubs and other ornamentals, establishing new roots is the key to successful and healthy plants, says a gardening specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"If you just take a plant out of its container, dig a hole and cover the root ball, that's almost guaranteed to slow or limit root growth," says Robert Nuss, professor emeritus of ornamental horticulture. "The most important element in gardening is helping plants establish new roots into the soil."

Nuss suggests that gardeners remove plastic containers, plastic twine or plastic burlap; remedy girdling roots; "butterfly" the root mass slice through the center of the bottom of the mass; and water, water everywhere.

Nuss warns that the soil surrounding the planting hole often is drier than the fill used to surround the root ball. "You need to pay attention to soil moisture in the entire area to prevent the fill from drying out," Nuss says.

Nuss also recommends laying mulch over the fill soil and mulching several feet past the diameter of the planting hole to keep the proper levels of moisture around the root zone of newly planted trees and shrubs. Keep all mulch several inches away from the trunk or stem of all plants.

Childcare For Mixed Ages

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Better Kid Care Satellite with activities and spaces for all ages, plus kids learning from kids and keeping everybody safe will be shown at the Berks County Ag Center, Leesport. The Child Care for Mixed Ages workshop is Thursday, June 6, 7-9 p.m. Cost is $3.

One of Andy Keeney's jobs after school is helping to feed their pens of dairy steers.

Family Rebuilds After Barn Fire

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

SEVEN VALLEYS (York Co.) — At the Keeney farm in Springfield Township, that Saturday morning of March 24, 2001, began as routinely as most mornings on a busy family dairy farm.

Randy, his wife, Darlene, and their children had finished regular morning barn chores and each was starting other jobs for the day. Randy was feeding cows. Darlene, following milking and milk house cleanup, left for their church several miles away. Two of their daughters began mixing a batch of cookies in the kitchen for a baking session.

But when the oven light persisted in blinking off and on, the sisters grew a bit concerned and headed out in search of their dad for some advice on the stove's electrical problem. Keeney, at about the same time, was headed toward the farm buildings with a load of silage, when he noticed a large, black spot on the side of the barn. The blackened area was directly around the site where the electric lines entered the building.

"I think the barn's on fire," Keeney said to his daughters, who promptly rushed back to the house and dialed 911. There was no smoke, nor flames. Nothing appeared to be burning.

But by the time the emergency dispatcher had been reached, and the girls stepped back outside, the roof of their dairy barn, barely 50 yards from the house, was in flames. A relentless wind which whipped the area that day caught the flames and quickly fanned the fire into an inferno.

"The firemen were here within about 10 minutes, but by then, the barn was already completely engulfed in fire," Darlene said, reliving the day which changed their family's dairy operation. Looking back, she relates having seen firefighting equipment pass by as she waited to pull out on the main highway on her way to church. She had barely arrived when the church phone rang, alerting her to the fire.

"I think I drove back home in disbelief or denial," she said, after having been assured that no one was hurt. A traffic jam of fire equipment, pickups and cars of responders, and neighbors blocked the road which passes the farm, forcing Darlene to park her van about a quarter-mile away, at son John's home, and walk the rest of the way.

She walked home in stunned shock, her eyes fixed on the smoking remains of the dairy barn. A tree next to the house had caught on fire and the Keeney daughters, watching from the safety of the kitchen, told their mother how they had watched the inside window thermometer climb to 130 degrees. A hanging plant inside the window was scorched and wilting. The house roof had a hole broken through where sparks had landed on the shingles.

But the house and other outbuildings had been spared. All cows and heifers were safe outside, although a bull calf and two puppies in the upper part of the barn were lost, the Keeneys believe most likely due to suffocation.

"Even with that, we were already counting our blessings," says Darlene. "No one was hurt, the house was spared, the cows were all safe."

"What are we going to do about the cows?" Keeney said to his wife. Several possibilities were discussed, including trying to salvage a portion of the badly-burned stall area to at least accommodate milking, even if it had to be done without benefit of a roof. Friends departed to haul back a portable milking parlor system someone had located. But, as milking time grew near, neither option proved to be workable.

"Randy didn't want the cows to be a burden to anyone," Darlene said. "It wasn't an easy decision."

By late afternoon, however, the Keeneys finally conceded to sending groups of cows to four of their closed dairy farm neighbors who had offered to house some with their own herds. A veritable parade of volunteers with trucks and trailers lined up and began moving cows in several directions to the farms of Dean Innerst, Ralph Latimer, Merrill and Harold Mummert, and Leroy Bupp.

With the herd settling in to temporary quarters, the Keeneys turned their attention to the badly-scorched silo still standing at the end of the smoldering pile of barn and feed materials. Closer inspection showed that the silo's concrete blocks had gotten so hot through the fire that they were extremely brittle and crumbly. For safety's sake, they made plans to pull the unstable silo down.

Saturday afternoon turned to night before equipment was in place to pull down the shaky tower. But rather than fall in the intended, safe spot away from the barn, the silo collapsed right into the smoldering remains. Blackened milk lines and cow stalls, including some which had initially escaped heat destruction, now lay mangled and bent under the tons of concrete block and heavy silage.

There was little sleep at the Keeney farm that night. By morning, faced with the pile of smoldering debris, cows dispersed through the neighborhood, Keeney was so disheartened he suggested they might just sell the herd and abandon dairying.

"The children were very supportive and encouraging. They all wanted to help," Darlene says of their close-knit family of eight children, all of whom had and continue to remain active with the family dairy and crops operations.

But support for the Keeney's dilemma reached far beyond the immediate family. Friends, church acquaintances, neighbors, people they barely knew began showing up to assist with the cleanup. Food arrived in an almost continuous procession. Envelopes with monetary contributions turned up in their van during church services, often bearing no signature to identify the giver.

"There was not a week that we didn't get a half-dozen calls, cards with encouragement, often with contributions, offers of time to help," Darlene says. "Churches did fund-raisers for us."

Those outpourings of support and encouragement, combined with some time to assess their situation turned the dilemma of "do we start again?" to "how and where do we start?" Tons of smoldering feed had to first be hauled away, a monumental chore in itself tackled by getting the manure cleaners running and loading it out via that system. As the damaged feed was hauled out in some 100 manure-spreader loads, volunteers picked through it for broken blocks, twisted metal and similar debris. The Keeney children, even those married and with jobs off the farm, were an almost constant presence on the cleanup crew when they were not working elsewhere.

"Our blessings just kept flowing. Just having people care enough to ask how it was going was comforting," says Darlene.

It took nearly a month of debris removal before a thorough assessment of all the damages were made. In the meantime, the Keeneys had already begun to evaluate systems and consider options for new facilities.

"We had lots of ideas, and changed a lot of ideas as we went. We wanted it to be functional, but to be able to live with the financial cost without burdening the next generation," said Darlene.

After several weeks of evaluation, visits to other facilities and discussions with suppliers, excavation began in late May for a double-10 herringbone milking parlor, equipped with 20 Bou-Matic automatic take-off milking units. There was never any concern about a solid foundation for the parlor, since early in the ground-moving they ran into a mass of solid rock, causing some additional delay. Over a weekend in mid-August, with some final details still to be completed, the Keeney's cattle were hauled back home for their first milking in the new parlor.

"We wouldn't want to go back to the old system," says Darlene, adamantly. "And while we had heard lots of horror stories about how difficult it would be to get the cows to adjust, we really had very few problems, even with the heifers. The parlor doesn't look confining, so maybe they think it's a place for them to escape the first time they go through."

Even though no feed is given to the cows while in the parlor, they still enter with little reluctance and absent a crowd gate. While the Keeney grandchildren initially missed the old barn which was so familiar to them, they quickly learned how "all the buttons work" on the new system. In fact the older ones enjoy helping to get the milkers ready before chores.

Darlene and daughter, Amy, handle a good portion of the milking responsibilities. Randy and son, John, are generally in the parlor to help with the morning shift, before heading out to feed and fieldwork. Sam, employed full-time at Godfrey Meats, arrives to help most evenings after his work hours. They find that a crew of three in the parlor helps to keep the cow flow steady and the milking pace moving along efficiently. Randy mixes feed and does the feeding for cows and heifers along with helping John with the crops of corn, hay, and grains.

Though housing for the herd was at a premium during the winter months, the mild weather proved to be yet another blessing. By bedding the parlor holding area and maximizing the use of their 66-stall freestall area, their growing numbers in the herd made it through the winter with relatively few problems. Expanded housing area is one of the first projects on the Keeney's future-to-do list.

While Darlene, Amy and John make up the backbone of the daily milking crew, everyone in the family pitches in to help as needed. Jenny and Julie, also employed by Godfrey Meats, help with milking and feeding, and Julie's husband, Chad Sweitzer, helps regularly, too. Daughter Becky is married to Nathan Stuber, who is employed by a contractor they utilized to help build the barn. During the parlor construction, Nathan often stayed beyond his normal work hours to help complete whatever job was most pressing. Emily, 16, and Andy, 15, can be counted on when not in school to join the family in milking, feeding and whatever jobs need their assistance.

John and his wife, Bethany, have three children, Hannah, 5, Jonathan, 4, and Devon, 3, and live on an adjoining farm. Sam and Rachel are the parents of Austin, 4, and Brianna, 18 months. Becky and Nathan's three sons, Justin, 6, Bryan, 4, and Dylan, 2, spend most of their weekdays at the farm while their mother is at work. Like most youngsters, the grandchildren enjoy being in the midst of the farm activity and take special pride in the farm's affectionate spring crop of kittens. These lively youngsters are especially important among the many blessings the Keeney family rejoice in each day.

Despite the initial despair of the fire, the Keeneys repeatedly express gratitude for the multitude of blessings that rose from the ashes. Arising from the charred wood, shattered blocks and twisted metal is a new milking facility and a renewed appreciation for farm life's daily joys and a host of caring family and friends.

Jenny, most avid gardener of the family, persuaded the family to arrange some of the charred timbers salvaged from the barn fire around the outer edges of the milk house and parlor to form landscaping and flowering planting areas. Their presence, brightened by the colorful blooms of annuals and decorative touches, are a silent, visual reminder of their resurrected dairying operation.

"We have truly been blessed through all of this, from the beginning," Darlene said.

Cousins Hannah Keeney and Justin Stuber find only empty nests when they search the henhouse for eggs.

Austin Keeney joins his cousins in exuberantly sliding down the silage sloop.

Attention Grassland FFA Alumni

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The Grassland FFA Chapter will be holding an Alumni Potluck Picnic, Sunday, June 30, at Brubaker Park, Fivepointville.

Starting time is 3 p.m. with various sports activities and chatting time. Supper will be served at 5:15 p.m. Alumni should bring one warm or cold dish and a dessert. A pig roast and chicken will be provided. The FFA will supply plates, utensils and drinks.

Following supper, a park tour and an update of Grassland Chapter activities will be offered.

After 32 years of dedicated service as FFA adviser, Cliff Day is retiring. It would be great joy for him to see all his former students at the picnic.

For Leids, Goat Dairy A Unique Family Project

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

STEVENS (Lancaster Co.) — "We keep things small here," said Titus Leid, who along with his wife Mabel own Wildflower Goat Farm.

Playhouses that Leid makes to sell, one example of the family's bent toward the miniature, are positioned at several places on the farm. Leid also opens the door to show daughter Rose's "pig" project — several small pens of long-coated, colorful guinea pigs.

Also on this dairy, the animals weigh and eat considerably less than their milk-producing counterparts.

At the Leid farm the producers are quick-footed, energetic goats — 180 of them altogether — that supply the milk that goes out every 72 hours.

to seven acres of woods. The herd consists of an assortment of Saanen, Alpine, Toggenburg, and Nubian cross breeds.

Although Saanens, often compared to the Holstein, produce the most milk, the Leids found that milking a variety of breeds helps to increase the protein and butterfat levels. Saanens do, however, comprise most of the Leid's herd. "It doesn't matter if most of them are white," said Leid. "We know them, and their personalities.

"This kind of job is good for the children because the goats are their friends, so they don't mind seeing them every day."

Currently the Leids are milking approximately 120 goats twice a day, at 5 a.m. and 4 p.m.

A Goat Meeting

In 1984 Leid was at a goat meeting conducted at a neighboring farm, "mostly because we were close," he said. There he filled out a questionnaire and indicated his interest in milking goats.

For several years, however, there was no response, so the family continued milking their handful of goats for their own use. The family has, in fact, been drinking and cooking with goat milk for 20 years.

In 1992 a Wisconsin-based cheese operation, Bongrain Cheese, called and asked if he was still interested in milking goats.

"We thought it would be something unique to do — a good family operation," he said.

Consequently they purchased a dairy goat herd from a West Virginia farm in 1994 and in March 1995 began shipping milk.

By lining goats up, taking measurements, and making adjustments, Leid designed his own parlor, which handles 19 goats at one time. Each rotation of 19 animals takes 12 minutes — a total of almost two hours for each milking.

"It's a nice job to come out and milk on winter mornings — it's pleasant in here," he said. The dairy truly is a family occupation, as the Leid children have their own assignments and help with each milking.

At milking time, the goats line up willingly at the door that will let them into the parlor. The same goats tend to end up in the same shift. Although most of the goats come voluntarily, the Leids end up chasing the last six goats in, "but they do it on purpose just to get attention,' he said.

Cooling the milk quickly is one of Leid's trade secrets for keeping the milk from getting a "goaty" flavor.

In addition the dairy, which includes six milkers, a pipeline, and tank system from a former cow dairy, helps moderate the milk's taste. Milking by hand in an uncovered container, he said, may flavor the milk, as goat milk quickly picks up scents and flavors from its surroundings.

Feeding and care also makes a difference in the taste, said Mabel. The Leids bring in the goats several hours before milking time to feed them hay, which seems to modify strong flavors such as garlic.

The Leids use a vacuum system to clean the dirt off the floor after milking.

They ship the milk to a branch division of Bongrain Cheese in nearby New Holland.

They also ship cheese to a farm that processes and markets goat milk to health food stores and directly markets goat milk cheese, yogurt, and ice cream.

The Leids shipped over 25,000 pounds for the month of May. Although the quantity produced by the goats is less than cows, goat milk — a specialty item — can command a price two to three times as much as cow milk.

Approximately half of the herd freshens in October and November to keep a consistent supply of milk throughout the winter months.

"Goats naturally kid in the spring, so you have to work against nature," he said. "We use lights on the goats for 20 hours for two months."

All of the milkers, for example, are under lights from January 1 through March 1. "They think they're having long days," he said. Then when the lights go off in March, in conjunction with springtime's cool temperatures and cloudy days, the goats are "tricked" into cycling.

All the daylight they have is natural light in March. "We try to keep chores short so there are no extra lights, so they cycle in 4-6 weeks," he said.

When they kid in the fall, the season is fairly concentrated. Most of the nannies kid in a span of one to two weeks. Last year, in fact, out of 100 goats, 80 kidded in two weeks. "So that makes for busy times."

Although the Leids used to check the expectant mothers throughout the night, they have found that most of the nannies kid in the afternoon, so they have enjoyed the extra sleep and simply check the herd throughout the day.

In the fall, the nannies are allowed to kid on the pastures.

After school the Leid children look forward to going out to the pastures to collect the nannies and kids, since the kids will be separated from their mothers after approximately 12 hours. This allows the kids time to get essential colostrum and yet allows the Leids the flexibility to teach them to drink from a trough while they are still young.

The nannies, on average, give birth to two kids each. Although one, three, and sometimes four kids may arrive, "two is enough," he said.

The Leids raise 40 kids each year for replacements. "The dairy doesn't necessarily take 40 a year but we're building our herd," he said. "We cull pretty hard." Only kids from the herd's best milkers stay on the farm.

Herd Health

Reading journals, news articles, and books helped to teach the Leids not only the dairying aspects of goats but also veterinary work, since Leid does most of his own goat health care.

"Worming is the key to goat-keeping," he said. "It keeps them healthy and eliminates lots of other problems." The Leids worm the herd four times a year.

In addition, twice a year they trim hooves and give the herd a dairy clip — trimming the belly and udder area, besides the beard to give the nannies a more feminine appearance, according to Leid.

Contrary to popular opinion, goats are not the tin-can eaters so often portrayed in art or song lyrics. Instead, "goats are picky eaters," he said. Leid buys consistently high-quality hay so the animals will not pick out the choicest vegetation and leave the rest.

They also feed pelleted feed during milking. This is a change from the loose mixed feed they used to give the goats. "They picked out whatever they wanted and left all the minerals, so it is put it all together in a pellet," he said.

According to Leid's research, 10 goats eat the same amount a cow consumes, and seven goats produce what one cow does, so the feed conversion rate is a little more efficient, he said.

Amy stops to enjoy a bite of a milkshake made from goat milk, a special treat.

The Leids raise approximately 40 of their own replacements each year.

Besides Titus and Mabel, the dairy's workload is shared by Rose, 17; David, 15; Amy, 10; Emily, 8; and Stephen, 4. Son James, 20, has an off-farm job and helps evenings and weekends.

The farm includes 15 acres, most of it in pasture. Besides open fields, the goats have access

Carbon Countians Work Together For Successful Fair

Carbon County 4-H Livestock Club officers accompany Bev Kershner, Carbon County Fair ag committee representative as Ron Fritz, Carbon Builders Association president presents donation to fair for 4-H premiums. From left, Justin Cunfer, president; Ashley Barry, secretary-treasurer, Bev Kershner; Ron Fritz; Josh Kemmerer, vice president; and Christi Graver, news reporter.

LEHIGHTON (Carbon Co.) — Three years ago the Lions and Lioness Clubs of Carbon County and West Penn Township, Schuylkill County undertook the huge task of coming together to establish a Carbon County Fair, something that was missing in the county since 1993.

The five-day 2000 fair was a huge success drawing a crowd in excess of 10,000. Being their first year of the required three-year probation period, however, meant no state funding to cover costs and premiums. Seeing an opportunity to show their support of the new fair association and the youth of the county 4-H program, the Carbon Builders Association donated $2,500 to be used for 4-H premiums.

The success of the fair's debut year along with seeing the interest shown by the public not only in an increased attendance but also by the number of 4-H and open exhibits prompted the Builders' Association to increase their donation to $3,000 for 2001 which was earmarked to be strictly applied to the payment of 4-H premiums.

The 2001 fair saw attendance of 38,000 with 90 4-H exhibitors entering 598 4-H exhibits with 4-H premiums of $3,226. The open competition saw 465 exhibitors enter 1,815 entries with premiums totaling over $7,200.

At a recent dinner meeting of the Builders' Association, President Ron Fritz presented fair ag committee representative Bev Kershner with their donation of $3,000 for the 2002 4-H premiums. Also present for the evening were the officers of the Carbon County 4-H Livestock Club; Justin Cunfer, president; Josh Kemmerer, vice president; Ashley Barry, secretary-treasurer; and Christi Graver, news reporter. The officers of the 4-H Livestock Club were selected to represent all the 4-H members of the county.

Because of the public exposure the 4-H Livestock Club has received in the past two years at the county fair the membership of their club has increased tremendously. By conducting the 4-H round-up during the fair the public has been able to see how active the 4-H clubs are in Carbon County. The livestock club in particular has received favorable publicity and support from the public, local government officials and area businesses that participate in the 4-H livestock sale for which the members are very grateful.

Lester Wentz, owner of Walck's Restaurant, site of the dinner meeting, has also been a strong supporter of the 4-H program in Carbon County. Wentz announced that he along with the Builders Association will be displaying a large banner showing their support of the 4-H program. This banner is visible along busy Route 248, a major thoroughfare in the area and will remain on display until after this year's fair which is scheduled for Aug. 7 through Aug. 11. This being the 100th anniversary of 4-H makes it even more appropriate to display their support for all to see.

Wentz along with Builders Association member Guy Barry said they feel 4-H members, particularly those involved with livestock projects, have good work ethics and are the responsible type individuals employers prefer to hire as employees.

Showcasing their talents and projects at the fair has promoted 4-H while the support received from the Builders Association and area businesses has helped to promote their businesses as well.

Pennsylvania Streams and Lakes

Stream MAP of Pennsylvania

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

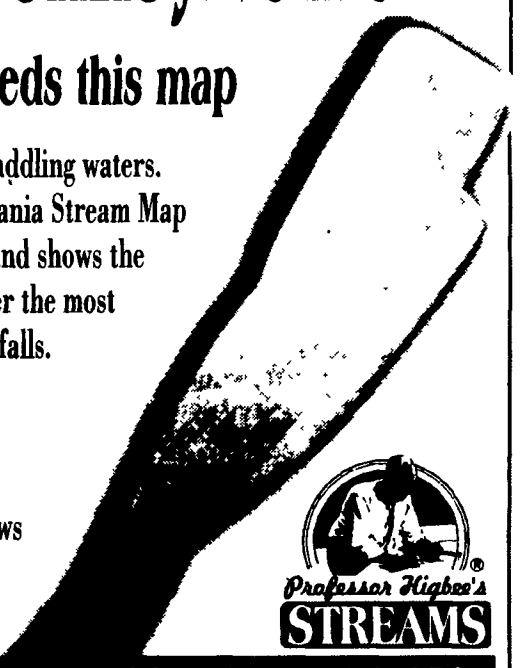
Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every paddler needs this map

Pennsylvania is loaded with great paddling waters. This new edition of the famous Pennsylvania Stream Map highlights navigable streams and rivers and shows the degree of difficulty (highest letter/number the most difficult), access points, dams and waterfalls.

Professor Higbee's® Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes.



RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."
—John Pitarres,
OBSERVER-DISPATCH,
Utica

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then "Professor Higbee's Stream Maps" are without question the finest."
—Howard Brant,
THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"I spent three hours looking at it [the Stream Map]. The accuracy, it's unbelievable."
—Victor Blauch

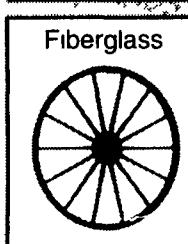
★★ New Products Now Available ★★

~ • The Advantages of the Fiberglass Wheels are ~

Fiberglass



Wheels

- Low Maintenance These wheels are built to last a lifetime. The only maintenance required will be tightening up or replacing a tire or rubber.
- High Performance Regardless of the Weather Wheels stay tight even in hot, dry conditions – No more loose, rattling spokes – ever!
- Rugged Heavy Duty Design It takes a major accident or impact to crack or twist these wheels.
- Hard Durable Surface Resists scuffs and scratches, paint job stays shiny!
- Easier Cleaning Spokes have all rounded corners, no tight spots for dirt to get into.

~ • The Advantages of the Fiberglass Springs are: ~

Fiberglass

Springs

- Lightweight A fiberglass spring weighs 22 lbs. less than a steel spring. 44 lbs. less weight on the carriage.
- Durable One Piece Design No bolts to give out or wear.
- Better Performance With Heavy Loads The more weight, the better the ride, will not go flat and bottom out.
- No Rusting Ever Paint will not blister or peel off. No rust stains running out between the plys, providing a nicer appearance and much easier cleaning.
- A Lifetime Guarantee If these springs ever break under normal use, we will replace them free of charge.
- Stabilizer Kits – Now Available For a smoother ride and less bounce.

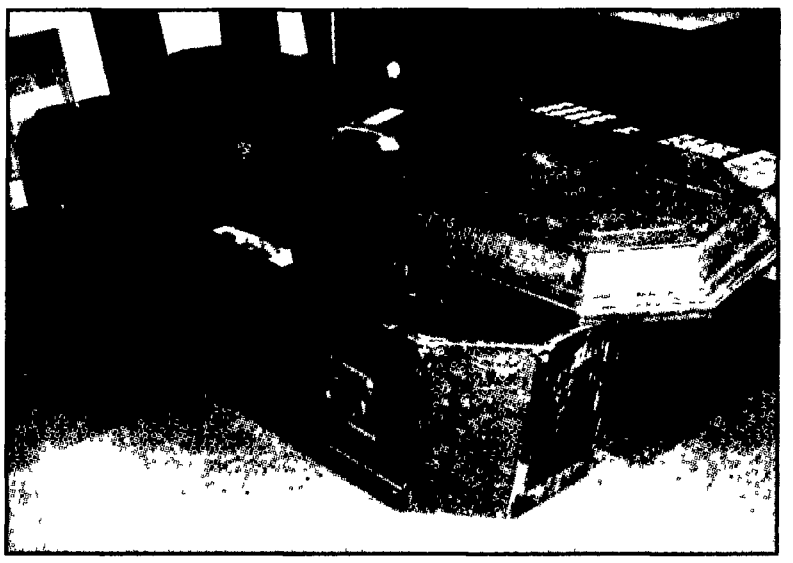
Country Furniture, Primitives, Folk Art, 'Ugly' Fascinate Al

This Gem roller organ was typical of those used by itinerant preachers who could easily carry the model on horseback. At services, the preacher inserted a "cob" and cranked the organ while the crowd sang along.



This 1870 viewing coffin includes original racks on which to place the body, below the slated rack is a container for ice used to keep the body cold. The lid was placed on the body and two top doors opened and closed to enable the bereaved to view the face and hands of the deceased.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — For the person who wants a unique coffee table guaranteed to stimulate conversation, Al Flammer has just the piece.

It's an 1870 viewing coffin with original racks, a container for ice to keep the body cool, and hinged doors.

The approximately six-foot pine-crafted box has two doors on the top that open and close to enable the head and arms of the deceased person to be viewed.

The viewing coffin was used as the name entails at viewings for the deceased. After the viewing the deceased was placed inside a simple pine box for burial.

Al believes this type of casket was used until about 1910 when metal caskets became available.

When asked if a coffin such as this is primarily purchased by museums or for private collections, Al shrugs. "When I suggest that prospective clients use it as a coffee table, the women shudder," he said.

It's unusual pieces such as these that fascinate Al. Pieces such as these capture history in a way that reading about it can never do. Al enjoys talking about the uniques pieces he has collected.

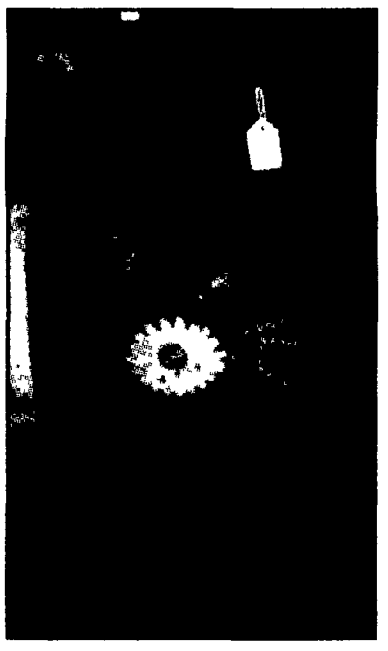
The unversed collector may inquire about the occasional ugly piece that Al bids on at auction and asks, "What are you going to do with that ugly thing?"

"'Ugly' sells. 'Ugly' brings big bucks," Al says of many primitive pieces.

But most of his pieces are not ugly even to the untrained eye. One of these is a Gem roller organ. The hand-cranked tabletop model has numerous "cobs" called that because the wooden rollers look like corn cobs. The rollers are indented with markings that produce wonderful tunes when inserted and cranked inside the roller.

"Most of tunes are Southern and Christian songs," Al said. That's because the roller organs were often used by itinerant preachers who could carry the small tabletop organ on horseback. During church services, the preacher cranked the organ and the crowd sang along.

Al believes the roller organs were popular from 1850-1890. In his 30 years of selling antiques, this is only the second model he has been able to purchase. The roller organ sells for $795 at Al's Antiques. Formerly called Antiques on the Square, where Routes 897 and 419 meet in Schaefferstown, Al's Antiques deals mostly with country furniture, primitives, pottery, folk art, and 'ugly' things.



This redware vessel, about 1880, was embellished with a floral painting, which devaluated the piece but is sure to attract a buyer.

He has a selection of redware pottery. Most are in their primitive state, but one large urn that he estimates was made in 1880 was later painted and embellished with flowers. Although the floral design is tastefully done, Al said it devalues the piece. He figures the painting was probably done during the 1930s.

Many shelves, old cupboards, and display cabinets enable Al's extensive collection of pottery to be viewed. This includes Polychrome transfer, Adams-style pottery, Gaudy Welsh, Flo-blue, blue transfer, Bennington, Rockingham, and other patterns.

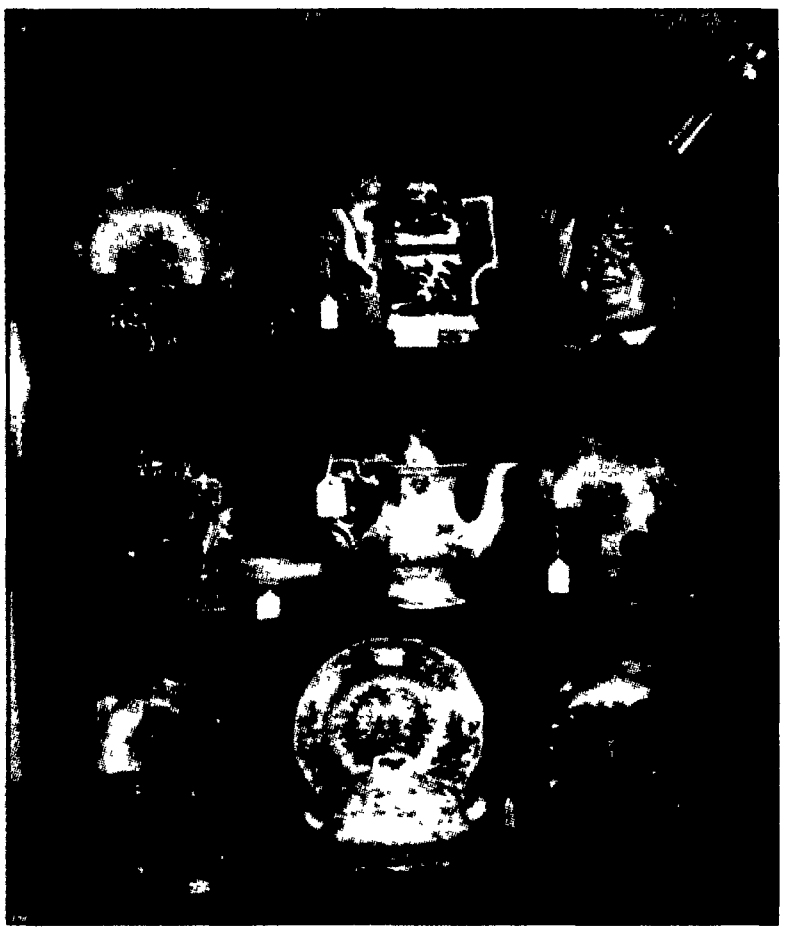
"I like kitchen stuff," Al said of gadgets such as cherry pitters, apple peelers, and utensils. "These pieces help us realize how hard the frontier women had to work. She was in front of her cookstove from morning to night using these things," Al said.

After Sept. 11, Al sold most of his collection intending to retire from the business of selling and buying.

"But it gets in your blood and stays in it," Al said of his and his wife's decision to again set up shop.

"It spites me that I sold so many of pieces at cost. My inventory is really low compared to what I had," he said. "I'm from the old school. No credit cards, no computer, and no cell phones. People are amazed, but I'm proving you can run a business without those things."

Al's Antiques was formerly known as Antiques on the Square. For more information, call Al at (717) 949-2871.



"This is stuff I enjoy," Al said of the cupboard with a collection of gaudy ironstone, flo-blue, blue transfer, polychrome transfer, and even a wooden tobacco jar.

A platter in the polychrome transfer pattern sells well in the area.

Women Illustrators Rate High With Collectors

In the early 20th century while women were fighting to find their place in the business and art world, the field of illustration offered some of the earliest opportunities.

Now, women illustrators are not only accepted on an equal par with their male counterparts, but their work commands top dollar. At the May 11 Illustration House auction, specializing in original illustrations, a Good Housekeeping magazine cover in charcoal, gouache and oil, by Jessie Willcox Smith (1863-1935) sold more than the $10,000/15,000 estimate for a whooping $30,000.

A Rose O'Neill (1875-1944) illustration for Harper's Bazzar, c. 1909 brought $2,200. O'Neill, is best known for her "kewpies." Western artist Thomas Hart Benton considered her to be "the world's greatest illustrator."

Many of these women illustrators, long forgotten, are being rediscovered and turn up at the Illustration House auctions. An example is Rhoda Holmes Nicholls (1854-1938). When one of her watercolors was offered at auction it brought $1,600.

Adding buyer interest was that she taught watercolor techniques under artist William Merritt Chase.

Grace Drayton(1877-1936) won recognition for her Dolly Dingle, Dolly Dimples cartoons. They became popular paper dolls in the 1930s. More familiar are her chubby-cheeked children created for Campbell Soup ads. Her original watercolor, pen and ink drawings for paper dolls can sell for more than $2,000.

Another pioneer illustrator was Fanny Young Cory (Coony) (1877-1972). She illustrated stories for the children's magazine, St. Nicholas. Her illustrations used humorous line and wash drawings. At auction her work can sell for $400 to $2,000.

If you visit the Capitol building in Harrisburg , Pennsylvania, you can see the large murals done in 1902 by Violet Oakley (1874-1961). Examples of illustrations done for magazines are rare. When discovered her charcoal sketching and drawings can sell at auction for several thousand dollars.

By 1915 women had moved into humor. Jessie Willing Gillespie (1888-1972) was an early satirist whose work can sell for more than a thousand dollars. Many of her illustrations for children's books were black and white silhouettes. Better known is Peggy Bacon (1895-1987. Her humorous illustrations appeared in The New Yorker, Town and Country, and Vanity Fair. Her work is still modestly priced from several hundred dollars to more than a thousand. A popular satirist for The New Yorker magazine in the 1930s was Helen Hokinson (1893-1949). Her pen, ink and watercolors can sell for $2,000.

By the 1930s-1940s, women illustrators branched into fields other than children's subjects and humor. Martha Sawyers began her career illustrating her travels to China and Indonesia. An exhibit of those paintings brought her to the attention of the Collier's Magazine art editor who sent her to the China-Burma-India area during World War 11 as an artist-correspondent. Few of her illustrations appeared in the marketplace till the 1988 Guernsey's auction. When examples do sell at auction prices range from $600 to several thou-

CLUES: You never know when or where you'll discover an example of an illustration by a woman artist. Like other categories, illustrations travel far from place of origin. They can be done in many media from pen and ink and pastels to oil, watercolors or mixed media.

Since signatures add to the value, it is important to identify them. "The Illustrator In America, 1860-2000" by Walt Reed, is a good source of reference with illustrated signatures, biographical sketches and examples by American illustrators. Priced at $49.95.

For information on their auctions and book, write Illustration House, 96 Spring Street, 7th floor, New York, NY 10012.

Antiques Questions And Answers

I bought this trunk at an auction. It says Anno 1620 on it. It is trimmed with ironwork in patterns. It looks like this trunk was once trimmed in velvet. It has heavy pull out drawers on the bottom. Any info appreciated.

L.B. - Sorrento, FL

What you have is a 19th century Continental chest, possibly German. From your photo it has been faked, but unfortunately the faker made some mistakes. The onion (ball) feet weren't used till 1694. The words "Anno 1620 have been recently painted. A similar chest sold at auction last year for $2,500.

cf43 Can you tell me anything about this piece of Imari belonging to my late aunt? No marks on the bottom.

D.B. - Naples, FL

I can't tell from a photo if your covered compote is Japanese or Chinese.

However since your piece is quite unusual and rare it could sell at auction for over $6,000.

This wooden ice box was given to me by my in-laws. I stripped off old white paint and refinished it. It has a name on it; "White Mountain Porcelain." Can you tell the age and value?

C.R.S. - North Arello, PA

Your oak, wood ice box could sell at auction for $200 to $500.

Can you tell me who made this swirled, blue and white glass vase, 14 ½" high. I bought it at auction in the 1980s.

K.B. - Cedar Rapids-IO
(collect.Journal)

Your bud vase is known as shaded, opalescent glass and was originally made in the late 19th century by several American glass houses.

Unfortunately, it was reproduced from the 1960s on. If authentic, it could sell at auction for around $125.

T.S.-Salt Springs, FL

Your library table is in the Art Deco style, probably European, dating 1920s. The black marble top adds to the value. A dealer could price it at $2,000 to $5,000.

This clock is of gilt metal. It is topped with the figure of an eagle and mounted on a black marble, with gilt rococo feet. It says "Ansonia Clock Co., New York, U.S.A. Patented June 13, 1882. It strikes on the hour and half hour. What is it worth?

T.K. - Salsburg, PA

Your mantle clock could sell for over $2,000 in a shop.

I have a pottery figure of a fox that my grandmother brought over from England around 1900. It is about six inches long. No marks. What can you tell from this photo?

D.M. - Dallas, TX

You appear to have a late 19th century Staffordshire figure. It could sell at auction for around $300 or more.

My late uncle who had belonged to the Shriners Fraternal Organization left me his felt Fez hat. Since I am not interested in it, what kind of value does it have?

T.S. - Staten Island, NY

The Warman's Price Guide lists a Shriner felt Fez hat at $25.

I have a silver Kiddush cup my grandmother brought from Russia when she came to America around 1900. It is

Catalyst International, Inc. To Focus On Biotech

OMAHA, Neb. — Dr. W.E. Julien, president and founder of W.E. Julien & Associates, an international consulting and product development firm founded in 1984, and founder in 1994 of Biovance Technologies, Inc., announced the information of a new subsidiary: Catalyst International, Inc.

Headquartered in Omaha, the firm offers total marketing services for carefully selected clients who have innovative biotechnologies for domestic and foreign agribusinesses.

In making the announcement, Julien said, "Catalyst International is uniquely positioned and uniquely qualified to help clients develop and expand new and existing markets for biotechnology. Over the past four decades my associates and I have developed a valuable network of contacts, friendships, and working relationships here and abroad. This network includes sales agents and distributors throughout the Pacific Rim, North and South America, the United Kingdom, Europe, the Middle East, and Australia.

"Marketing in the biotech age requires a holistic blend of communications skills and technological proficiency. As part of a world economy, it also requires experience and sensitivity to the nuances of doing business in other cultures.

"Our mission," he said, "is to serve clients who have environmentally friendly technologies for the commercial and companion animal industries, and to explain and market these technologies to the end users. To accomplish this mission we will use worldwide network, the experience, intellectual resources and creativity of our group of scientists, engineers, and marketing professionals."

To learn more about Catalyst International, call Kathy Petersen at (402) 571-5591.

Case IH Guidance System Conserves On-Farm Resources

RACINE, Wis. — The new Case IH EZ-Guide™ lightbar is a tool to help save valuable input and management resources. The guidance system keeps farm equipment, like tractors and sprayers, precisely on course during field preparation, chemical and fertilizer application, air seeding, and other in-field operations.

This handy helper is the newest element of the Case IH Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) line, adding an extra element of preciseness to precision farming.

"It uses differential GPS (Global Positioning System) information to display how far to the left or right an operator might be from his desired path," explains Ken Lehmann, Case IH product training manager.

The Case IH EZ-Guide lightbar brings producers greater accuracy and reliability at an affordable price, he says. "The bottom line is that you eliminate costly skips and overlaps, assuring more even application of fertilizers, chemicals and the like."

The lightbar package includes a high performance GPS antenna/receiver, as well as a magnetic antenna mount, a suction cup for lightbar mounting, and a backlit keypad controller that can be conveniently mounted.

"The Case IH EZ-Guide™ lightbar can be used under any conditions day or night, wind or rain, dust or fog with no deterioration in performance," he points out. "It allows you to extend your hours of operation, accomplishing more and being more productive each working day."

Besides lowering costs by reducing skips and minimizing overlaps, the lightbar eliminates the need for foam markers and their associated ongoing costs. And, even more important, it can help reduce operator fatigue.

"As in all industries, many farms are suffering from a shortage of skilled labor," Lehmann notes. "The Case IH lightbar reduces operator stress and concentration required in the field, allowing for longer work days."

As with other Case IH AFS components, the GPS receiver can be moved to your combine to use with your yield monitor to generate yield maps. A separate harness is required for use with the Case IH AFS yield monitor.

How difficult is its setup and configuration? "Actually, it's very easy," Lehmann says. "The only configuration needed is entry of the swath width."

The Case IH lightbar supports both the free WAAS system and the subscription-based L-Band satellite differential correction, sold separately. An audible alarm warns the operator when he or she drifts from the swath, crosses the headland or the correction signal is lost.

Free software upgrades are available, and the lightbar carries a two-year warranty. Case IH dealers can retrofit the system to the existing equipment in your tractor, sprayer or combine.

Case IH sells and supports a full line of equipment, parts, aftersales service and financial services through a network of more than 4,000 professional dealers in 150 countries. Farmers who use Case IH equipment for crop and livestock production count on these reliable and durable systems of products. Products include tractors in all sizes; combines; specialty harvesters for cotton, sugar and coffee; hay and forage equipment;' and a complete line of tillage, seeding and sprayers linked under the Advanced Farming Systems. CNH Global, N.V., manufacturer of the Case IH brand, is a global leader in the agricultural equipment, construction equipment and financial services industries.

High-Value Specialty Crop Opportunities Exist

RALEIGH, N.C. — At a press conference organized by Kings, Inc. and Pilot Therapeutics Holdings, Inc. (OTC Bulletin Board: PLTT.OB), Kings announced plans to introduce high-value, specialty crops grown in North Carolina for the food, biotechnology, and pharmaceutical industries.

In addition, Kings, a wholly owned subsidiary of Associated British Foods plc (FTSE: ABF), a U.K. company with $6.4 billion in annual revenues, announced the establishment of its global headquarters in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Kings is a leader in the supply-chain management of high-value, speciality plant-derived products, where sustainability, assurety, continuity, and traceability are key drivers for its customers. Managing risk out of the supply chain and delivering cost-effective, turnkey solutions for businesses dependent upon natural and inherently variable and unreliable raw materials is a core competence.

Pilot, a Winston-Salem-based specialty pharmaceutical company with a portfolio of pharmaceutical products and clinically validated over-the-counter (OTC) medical food products, plans to be a primary beneficiary of the announcement by Kings.

"By collaborating with Kings, Pilot ensures superior and consistent quality of the specialty oils that are the active ingredients in Pilot's botanical drug and medical food products," said Floyd H. "Ski" Chilton, Ph.D., Pilot's president and chief executive officer. "Kings' rigorous, scientific 'soil to oil' approach to crop sourcing and extract delivery is required by and perfectly complements Pilot's rigorous pharmaceutical approach to natural product development."

"Because of our synergies with Pilot and our belief that Pilot's products have tremendous market-growth potential, we are locating our global headquarters in Winston-Salem," explained Andrew Hebard, Kings Inc., chief executive officer. "In addition, we recognize that the fertile ground of North Carolina could be conducive to growing specialty crops and with the support of the state's proactive agricultural community, North Carolina is an appropriate place to build agri-based businesses."

He added that, in cooperation with North Carolina State University, Kings has contracted with North Carolina growers to plant test crops this spring, with the intention of planting significant acreage of its specialty crops, including crops for Pilot's products, next year. Kings contracts approximately 250,000 acres of premium "identity preserved" crops directly with growers around the world. Introducing new high-value, specialty crops to North Carolina could have a major impact in the agricultural growing and processing community, Hebard predicted.

State and local officials — including North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Meg Scott Phipps, North Carolina State University Chancellor Marye Ann Fox, Ph.D., former Governor James B. Hunt, now practicing law at Womble Carlyle Sandridge and Rice, and S. Lawrence Davenport, chair of the not-for-profit Golden LEAF Foundation — participated in the press conference, commending Kings and Pilot for their efforts to positively impact North Carolina's economy.

"The state of North Carolina and the Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services are honored to welcome Kings," said Commissioner Phipps. "We believe that the strategic relationship between Kings and Pilot is a key example of how North Carolina's great agricultural traditions can be wedded to the state's newer economy — namely the biotechnology and pharmaceutical industries) — to benefit the people of North Carolina, the nation, and the world. We look forward to hearing more exciting news from Kings and Pilot in the months and years to come."

North Carolina-based Pilot Therapeutics is a development stage specialty pharmaceutical company that has developed a robust pipeline of pharmaceutical product candidates and clinically validated over-the-counter (OTC) medical food products. A world leader in fatty acid metabolism, Pilot has pioneered Functional Liponomics (TM), a proprietary, state-of-the-art research platform combing fatty acid and genomic profiling, and has used this research to develop or acquire product candidates for asthma, coronary heart disease, cystic acne and cancer. Pilot is in the process of filing an Investigational Drug Applications (INDs) for its lead pharmaceutical product candidates, PLT 1731 to treat asthma, and PLT 732 to treat elevated triglycerides associated with heart disease, diabetes, and stroke. Its lead OTC medical food product, AIROZIN (TM), is the first clinically proven OTC maintenance product for the dietary management of asthma, a disease that afflicts approximately 17 million Americans. The company's common stock is traded on the Over-the-Counter Bulletin Board under the ticker symbol "PLTT.OB."

Associated British Foods is an international food, ingredients, and retail group with annual sales of $6.4 billion and 34,000 employees. The group is one of Europe's largest food companies with a wide range of successful brands and products in the food sector, and an increasingly strong presence in advanced research and technology, where it is turning natural products into innovative ingredients for the food, personal care and pharmaceutical industries. A significant supplier of branded and non-branded grocery products and a leading textile retailer, the company has major businesses in Europe, Australia, New Zealand, China, and the United States. Its wholly owned subsidiary, Kings Inc., is a leader in growing and processing specialty crops, including borage, evening primrose, and high-erucic acid rapeseed, from 'soil' to 'oil' for the food, personal care, and pharmaceutical industries.

SmartStart Venture ForumSM Seeks Business Plans

TROY, N.Y. — The Empire State Venture Group, Inc. producers of the SmartStart Venture ForumSM, announced that they are accepting applications to present at the second annual event Oct. 2-3 at the Albany Marriott Hotel in Albany, N.Y.

"Last year the SmartStart Venture ForumSM attracted over 100 applications from technology companies from across the Northeast. We selected 36 of these companies to exhibit at the event and 27 companies made eight-minute presentations to the investor community on Oct. 2." said Robert Buckley event coordinator. "To date, nine of these companies have received some form of funding totaling more than $20 million. These investments range from $100,000 to more than $4 million."

"The rigorous selection process and the exacting training program through which we put the companies last year helped to attract interest in them." said Prof. Frederick A. Provorny, director of the Science and Technology Law Center at Albany Law School and president of the Empire State Venture Group, Inc. "We've been following up closely with the companies that presented last year and many are in serious negotiations with interested sources of funding. In the aftermath of last fall and with the economy overall, few technology venture deals have received funding. Therefore, the fact that nine of our presenting companies have received funding is nothing short of phenomenal."

Companies wishing to present at the second annual event are encouraged to visit the SmartStart Venture ForumSM Website www.smartstartvf.com for completed details on applying.

For additional information, contact Robert Buckley, coordinator, at (518) 283-8890 or e-mail him at bob@smartstartvf.com.

SAT., JUNE 29, 2002

12 NOON

Auction to be held 2 miles south of Port Royal along Mountain Road, between Reservoir Road & Butcher Shop Road in Turbett Township

Ranch-Style Home

A .47 acre surveyed lot erected thereon a 1972 28'x40' three bedroom ranch-style dwelling with an attached 24'x32' carport and a 16'x24' rear deck. A large modern eat-in kitchen with plenty of counter space features a pantry closet and includes a built-in dishwasher, hardwood floors highlight the living room, hallway and bedrooms of this charming home. A large bathroom with linen closet. Electrolux central vacuum system, and mountain stone fireplace in the full concrete basement completes this dwelling. The home also includes standard sewage and well, an outside cellar entrance and forced hot-air heating system. Just far enough from town to be considered "country," but close enough to be convenient, here is a modern, well-maintained home you won't want to miss.

Terms: 10% down day of sale, balance due in 30 days. Cash or good PA check

REAL ESTATE AUCTION

Friday Evening, July 5, 2002
7:00 PM

Auction to be held 5 miles south of Port Royal, Juniata County, along Mountain Road at the corner of Matamoras and Mountain Roads in Spruce Hill Township.

Juniata County Country Living Ranch Home

A 1-acre surveyed corner lot erected thereon a 28'x40' Early American-style brick-fronted, one-story 2-bedroom ranch dwelling with attached 10'x20' enclosed breezeway and 28'x30' 2-car insulated garage. The garage has automatic overhead garage doors, concrete floor and shelves for storage, the breezeway has washer/dryer hook-up and is fully carpeted. A modern walk-through Early American-style kitchen has plenty of storage space, includes refrigerator and gas stove and has a breakfast nook with sliding glass door which opens onto a 12'x18'- deck. The large living room has a brick-floor foyer front entrance, built-in air conditioning unit and wall-to-wall carpeting. Two large bedrooms with two closets in each room, full bath, 2 linen closets, and ceiling fans in every room complete this residence. A full concrete basement with outside entrance, shower stall, stairway inclinator, Kodiak woodstove, drilled well, water conditioning system, on-site sewage, 200 amp electric service, hot water oil-fired heating system, and new shingle roof make this a sought-after dwelling. This beautiful level lot features many well-established flowering shrubs and decorator trees including flowering cherry trees, dogwoods, rhododendrons, holly bushes, many types of pines and a small orchard. A beautiful country corner lot overlooking the Spruce Hill valley, backed by the Tuscarora Mountain – a must-see property.

Terms: 10% down day of sale, balance due in 30 days.

13209 Greensburg Road

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

To be sold Saturday at 1:00 pm

The real estate with improvements is located in Washington County's 14th Election District along the north side of Greensburg Road near its intersection with Bikle Road. The land area is approximately 3.15 acres which is better described in Liber 1262, Folio 734 of the County land records.

Improvements to this outstanding property include a very well maintained two-story home containing a living room with fireplace, dining room, dine-in kitchen with nook area, bath with shower and a utility/laundry room all on the first floor. The second level contains two bedrooms and a bath. There is also an attic as well as a partial basement. Heat to the home is provided by an electric baseboard system and an oil forced air system. Water is provided by a well and a septic provides for the sewage. Also located on the property are several nice masonry constructed structures including a barn with loft, machine shed with corn crib, stable, two vehicle garage with workshop and a fireplace, smoke house and a nice screened picnic pavilion with fireplace.

Inspection of the Real Estate may be made by contacting the Personal Representative at 301-824-2348 for an appointment.

Terms of the Real Estate include a non-refundable deposit of $10,000.00 in certified funds in the form of cash, certified check or in other forms as the Auction Company may determine acceptable prior to the auction. One half of the documentary stamps and transfer fees are to be paid by the purchaser, with taxes and utilities prorated to date of settlement. Settlement to be made within 45 days. The sale is subject only to the acceptance of the Personal Representative of the Estate. No Buyers Premium.

❖ BUSINESS NEWS ❖

Potter Joins White Oak Mills

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — White Oak Mills Inc. has announced the addition of Randy Potter, of Greencastle, to its dairy team.

Focusing his efforts in Adams, Cumberland and Franklin counties, as well as in northern Maryland, he will concentrate specifically on meeting dairy producer's feed and management needs. He will serve as a White Oak Mills dairy specialist.

Following his three years of service in the U.S. Army, two years of which he was stationed in Germany, Potter served as an electrician at the Letterkenny Army Depot.

Potter did missionary work in Guatemala for 12 years. During his time in Guatemala, he assisted with the planting and harvesting of corn and sesame on a 44-acre farm and taught a small Brown Swiss dairy producer how to make corn silage. Potter is bilingual in English and Spanish.

Since 1999, he has served as a seventh through 10th grade teacher for Antrim Mennonite School, Greencastle, and worked with an independent dairy mineral representative during the summer months.

"Randy's character traits, skills and desire to learn make him a welcome addition to our dairy team," says Brad Wagner, White Oak Mills dairy sales manager. "He'll be an integral part of White Oak's plan to increase the amount of dairy service provided to the industry."

Fendt Adds New Reverse Station Model

ATLANTA, Ga. — Fendt is adding another reverse station model to its line of heavyweight fixed-frame tractors. Weighing in at nearly nine tons, the 160 PTO horsepower Fendt Vario® 918 Reverse Station from Agco Corporation offers one of the highest horsepower-to-weight ratios in the tractor market today, along with unsurpassed flexibility.

The four-wheel drive 918 is designed to handle big equipment with ease where lighter tractors might be pushed around. Its turntable-mounted seat, steering wheel and armrest control panel allow operating the tractor in either direction depending on implement selection.

"The 918 Reverse Station has the power and the weight to handle 20- to 30-foot mower conditioners or large forage harvesters with control and maneuverability that exceeds single-purpose, self-propelled units," says Kevin Bien, general marketing manger. "Mounting heavy implements on the rear axle ensures better balance and handling, and unsurpassed visibility."

Like other members of the Fendt Vario 900 Series, the 918 Reverse Station is loaded with innovative features. The stepless continuously variable transmission (CVT) offers infinite speed selection up to 31 mph in forward gear and up to 15.5 mph in reverse. The three-phase suspension system produces a safer and less tiring ride in the field or over rough roads. The power transfer system with intelligent four-wheel drive and differential locking control puts more horsepower to the drawbar than any comparable horsepower tractor.

"Automatic four-wheel drive and differential lock engagement provide operator relief, easy maneuvering and greater transfer of power as needed," says Blake Gendebien, sales engineer. "For maximum transfer of power, they can permanently engage four-wheel drive and/or front and rear differentials."

The Fendt 918 hydraulic system with its electro hydraulic controls automatically compensates for pressure and flow. It comes with four-hydraulic remotes that produce 30 gpm flow for maximum capacity plus one set of front-mounted couplers as a factory-installed option.

The 918 Reverse Station offers a 64- to 88-inch tread adjustment and comes standard with premium Michelin tires. The rear three-point lift capacity is 15,600 pounds at 24 inches. An optional front-mounted three-point lift has an 8,000 pound capacity and allows quick switching of up to two tons of counterweight from front to back to properly balance the tractor for any use.

New Massey Ferguson Tractor Offers Advanced Performance Features

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson's new 45 PTO horsepower MF 251XE utility tractor offers a combination of advanced engine, transmission, hydraulics, PTO and two- and four-wheel drive features that meet the increased application needs of farmers and landscaping and turf maintenance specialists.

The new MF 251XE is powered by a fuel-efficient three-cylinder Perkins diesel engine with a Fastram® combustion system that converts more fuel to energy. "This engine delivers unequaled torque, efficiency and reliability for tillage, planting, mowing, hauling, grading and chores," said Tim Wagner, Massey Ferguson general marketing manager. "Its unique long stroke design develops high torque at low engine rpm's for added lugging power without constant gear changes."

An eight-speed manual transmission features sliding gears with planetary reduction to provide eight forward and two reverse speeds. Two speeds are used for slow operations, four are working speeds for farm, landscaping and turf operations, and two high-speed gears are used for transport.

The MF 251XE is equipped to handle a wide range of applications with a Category I three-point hitch and advanced Ferguson® system hydraulics for precise implement control. A draft-sensing top link provides draft response to maintain an even working depth, and the position control lets the operator set and maintain the implement position.

A dual-stage foot clutch controls both the transmission and the live 540 PTO. PTO speed is achieved at a low 1908 engine rpm, allowing the engine to run at a higher torque rating under full load to help prevent lug down and the need to change ground speed.

The MF 251XE is available in both two- and four-wheel drive models. The two-wheel drive tractor uses a telescopic box-in-box design front axle with a 50-degree turning angle. The four-wheel drive model has a cast front axle with parallel drive for a low center of gravity and a tight 50-degree turning angle. Both two and four-wheel drive tractors have oil-cooled disc brakes for extra stopping power and long life.

The new Hesston 700 Series Rounder® balers set a new standard for high performance at an economical cost.

New Value-Priced Models Round Out Hesston Baler Line

ATLANTA, Ga. — The new Hesston 700 Series Rounder® balers are designed to produce high-density round bales of 39 or 47 inches in width by up to 52 inches tall (990 or 1200 millimeters wide by up to 1320 millimeters tall) at a very economical overall cost.

"The Hesston 730 and 740 balers have the superior features and quality farmers have come to expect from Hesston," reports Eric Raby, Hesston general marketing manager, "at a price that makes them competitive with any other baler on the market. These balers are particularly well suited for first-time buyers and smaller growers with limited budgets and tractors. For about the price of a good used machine, they get the reliability and performance of a new Hesston baler. This is particularly appealing to weekend farmers who need big performance and big bales, but don't have the time to deal with used-equipment breakdowns."

Both the Hesston 730 and 740 Rounder balers feature the open-throat, vertical-bale-chamber design found on Hesston's premium balers. This ensures quick, sure bale starts and excellent capacity, without the need for a special floor roller and its resulting problems and maintenance. In addition, separate bale and belt tensioners ensure tighter bales while also keeping the belts snug during bale dumping to prevent damage caused by slack belts. The 740 features hydraulic tension, while the 730 has spring tension. For short, dry crops, a filler plate improves bale shape, while a pickup de-clutcher prevents making oversize bales.

JD Mini-Frame Z-Traks Zip Through Jobs

TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Commercial operators will zoom through jobs with precision and efficiency with John Deere 717 and 727 Mini-Frame Z-Traks®. The zero-turning-radius on these machines increases productivity and adds control, while the smaller frame requires less trailer space and boosts maneuverability on tight jobs.

Durability is key in commercial mowing and the 717 and 727 have it with their deep-deck mowers, made with seven-gauge steel and powerful vacuuming action that lifts grass before cutting and handles more material.

Made for the high-usage commercial market, these mowers are ideal for apartment and other residential properties, business and industrial complexes, and many others.

The 717 model has a 19-hp, air-cooled Kawasaki gas engine with a 48-inch commercial mower 7-Iron® deck; the 727 model is powered by a 23-hp, air-cooled Kawasaki and mows with a 54-inch 7-Iron deck.

Both models have overhead valve design that offer more horsepower and torque per cubic inch of displacement, better fuel efficiency and minimized noise.

The two-lever drive control allows operators to select ground speed and direction by simply moving the levers forward and reverse.

With an eight U.S.-gallon fuel tank, operators can mow all day on one tank of gas. The top draw tank increases safety, while the large filler neck makes for easier refueling.

Both the 717 and 727 come with 23 by 9.5-12, 4PR drive tires and 13 by 5 by 6 front caster wheels that provide excellent traction, floatation and curb climbing as well as a low center of gravity to increase hillside moving capabilities.

Wind Patterns Right For Additional Insect Pressure This Season

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Warmer weather and southerly wind patterns moving up from the Gulf of Mexico mean growers in the Northeast could expect additional unwanted Southern visitors in their corn and alfalfa this summer.

An especially warm, breezy week in mid-April already introduced an early wave of black cutworm and true armyworm moths into the area. If current weather patterns hold, alfalfa growers could see potato leafhoppers, as well. That's why agricultural specialists with Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., say awareness and proper pest management can help minimize the potential for challenges later in the growing season.

"We're advising growers to be aware of the potential for these three pests," says Joey Mayer, a Pioneer agronomist based in Pennsylvania. "We've already seen heavy cutworm and armyworm moth flights. However, that doesn't necessarily mean we'll see crop damage later in the season because these insects depend on other factors to prosper."

Temperature, rainfall and egg hatch of other predators and parasites also influence the survivability of these insects.

"It's hard to know whether we should worry about these pests right now," says Mayer. "However, every eight or nine years, we do have a serious problem, and we're due. That's why it's important to be prepared for both black cutworm and armyworm in corn."

Black Cutworm

According to Mayer, black cutworm moths are the traditional dull, grayish-brown miller moths that are attracted to lights at night. Their larvae are shiny and smooth gray or dark brown worms with stripes and spots on the back. When touched, they coil into a "C" shape.

First-generation offspring hatch prior to corn planting and feed on weeds before moving to corn seedlings. Young larvae feed on the new leaves of the plants, while older larvae tunnel into the plant below ground. Three to four generations in one season are common, although the first generation is the most concerning.

True Armyworm Moths

Armyworm moths are about an inch long with tan wings and a white spot centered on each front wing. Larvae are an inch and a half long and are green with dark stripes. They move in a looping motion.

Moths typically lay eggs in grass or small grain fields that are planted to corn later. Larvae move en masse (like army soldiers) to feed on the upper leaves of corn plants.

Mayer says growers have three choices when it comes to managing these two corn pests.

- Do nothing and hope infestation does not become an issue.
- Spend about $4 an acre and add a pyrethroid insecticide to pre- or post-emergence herbicide treatments as an insurance policy in case infestation levels become a concern.
- Scout fields twice weekly as soon as plants emerge, starting with late-planted, low, damp areas with heavy weed growth or plant stubble. If you see two cutworms per 100 plants or believe that three percent of the stand is affected, you may want to treat. When checking for armyworms, if 25 percent of all plants checked show damage, consider treatment.
- Tillage can reduce the potential for infestation provided you were in the fields before the first flight of moths arrived in mid-April. If you plowed after moths were spotted in the area, you may be too late and should opt for an insecticide treatment to eliminate the pest.

"It's important to know what's happening in your fields because if infestation levels do reach a high this year, you could lose 30 to 40 percent of your crop," Mayer says.

Potato Leafhopper

Mayer says you'll also want to watch alfalfa stands for potato leafhoppers. Adult leafhoppers, like cutworm and armyworm moths, blow in on a southern wind current. These lime-green, wedge-shaped winged insects measure one-eighth of an inch and are difficult to see because of their size and the fact that they seek cover when plants are disturbed.

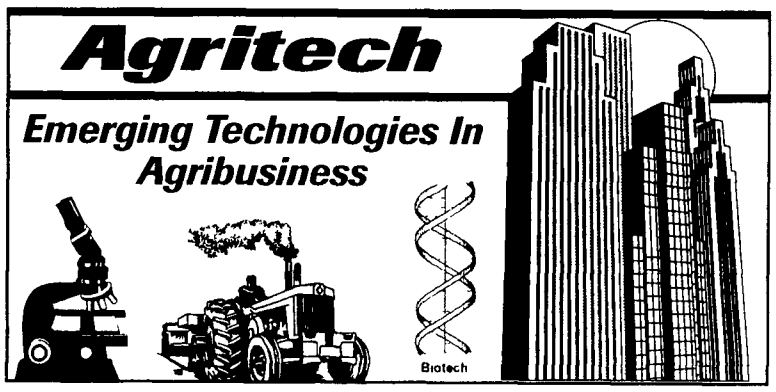
Adults and their nymphs feed on established stands but also are attracted to new seedings. They use a mouth probe to extract leaf tissue. The probe wounds the plant, leading to leaf chlorosis, which begins as a v-shaped yellowish color at the leaf tips and eventually stunts plant growth.

Mayer says the pest does not affect first-cutting alfalfa. However, this year, you may see signs of injury in second cuttings because of the warmer weather and earlier arrival of leafhoppers.

One way to monitor leafhopper activities is to scout fields using a seep net. Two leafhoppers per 10 sweeps are considered high in a new spring seeding of alfalfa and mean you'll want to consider spraying your crop. Older stands are more tolerant to feeding but should be monitored closely.

Mayer suggests using a pyrethroid insecticide with little or no residual effect in early to mid-June. However, if you've planted leafhopper-resistant varieties, you might be able to hold off, as these plants better withstand infestation.

For more information about managing cutworms, armyworms or potato leafhopper this season, contact your local Pioneer seed professional.



RMS Launches Technology To ID Track Animals

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — RMS Research Management Systems USA, Inc. (RMS), is marketing a national identification and tracking technology for livestock.

This secure, easy to use, cost-effective system can handle infinite numbers of unique livestock identification codes, enabling users to source verify and rapidly trace health history of individual animals.

RMS recently licensed the rights to the technology used for the Canadian Cattle Identification System (CCIS), and has used this proven infrastructure for the foundation in developing a new global identification system. RMS expanded the CCIS technology beyond health and safety applications to include detailed production and carcass information for individually identified livestock.

When an animal record is created in the RMS National ID Program, the system generates a globally unique ID code. The computer then links the animals' tag-ID and data records to the unique identifier code. Any information that users input into the RMS internet-enabled information network (CattleDataNetwork) can also be linked with the individuals National ID Program code resulting in a complete history record of an animals life from birth to harvest.

This comprehensive technology offers beneficial solutions to every participant in the red meat industry. It specifically applies to disease control, biosecurity, food safety, livestock management, and genetic improvement.

RMS provides red meat industry technologies, including the award-winning Computer Vision System (CVS), a carcass imaging system which captures, analyzes, and distributes individual animal information to improve quality, safety, and financial rewards for producers, feeders, packers, as well as retailers in the red meat industry. For more information, visit the Website at www.rms.ca or call (970) 226-4080.

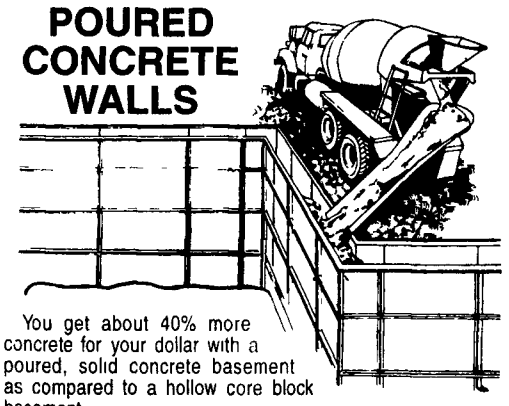
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:
• Manure Pit Walls • House Foundation Walls
• Hog House Walls • Silage Pit Walls
• Barnyard Walls • Cistern Walls
• Chicken House Walls • Concrete Decks

1 FARM EQUIPMENT

"We saw an increase in milk"

- Joe Graybill, Graywood Farm, Peach Bottom, PA

Graywood Farm bought a truck-mounted Roto-Mix feed mixer in October 2001. Joe Graybill says the mixer does an excellent job of mixing, with very little particle size damage. He's also very pleased with the way the truck mixer handles.

Graywood Farm Milks over 400 cows.

Cut faster... condition better

For greater maneuverability and higher efficiency, nothing beats the Model 1431 Discbine® disc mower-conditioner from New Holland. It features a 13' cutting width, and operates at high ground speeds in wet, heavy grass without plugging. Fire anthills and gopher mounds won't stop the new Model 1431 either.

Outstanding features include:

- A center pivot-tongue design
- Independent modular cutterbar with ten small-diameter cutting discs
- 102" wide conditioning rolls
- A full range of vertical and lateral flotation
- A torsion-bar, roll-pressure system
- A cutterbar driven from both ends

NEW HOLLAND

For maximum harvesting efficiency, check out the Model 1431 Discbine.

It's the best in the field and it's in stock now!

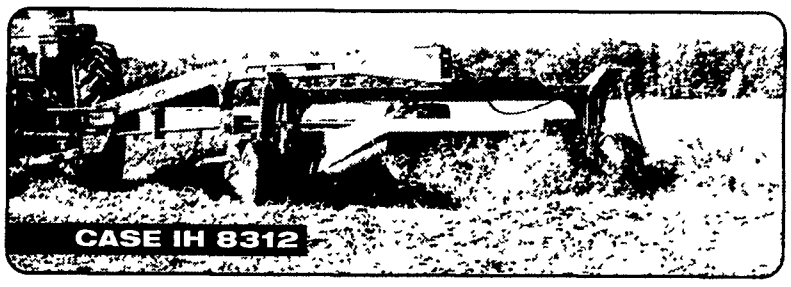
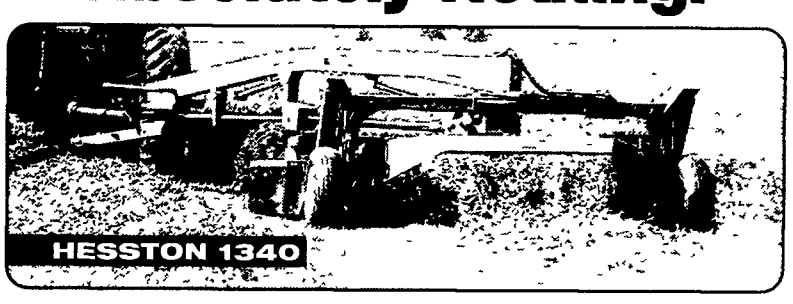
What's The Difference Between a Case IH 8312 and a Hesston 1340 Mower Conditioner?



Absolutely Nothing.



The reliability and performance of a Case IH 8312 Pull-Type Mower Conditioner, that you have come to trust for 15 years, can now be found in our Hesston 1340 Mower Conditioner.

Hesston 1340 Pull-Type Mower Conditioner

Hesston mower conditioners are known for delivering clean, fast cuts in the field and being able to work in tough conditions These machines were the first mower conditioners that allow you to cut on either side of the tractor, cut square corners with no knuckle-rap, or maneuver around field obstacles with a disc cutterbed machine

- 12' Cutting Width
- Eight Cutting Discs
- Center-Pivot Maneuverability
- Rubber-On-Steel Conditioning Rolls
- 3 Point Swivel Hitch Option
- 1000 RPM Drive

Hoober has Hesston 1340 Mower Conditioners in stock and ready for delivery.

JOHN DEERE ROTARY CUTTERS

DOUBLE-DECK DURABILITY

John Deere's exclusive double-decker design includes a domed top deck that sheds water and grass, preventing rust, and a bottom deck that protects the top deck from stumps and rocks. Put them together and you get a machine that's twice as strong as any other cutter.

Rotary Cutters Are Available in 4 ft. to 20 ft. Cutting Widths for Light-Mid and Heavy Duty Applications

CLUTCHES/GEAR REDUCTION ASSEMBLIES

Our Specialty

We stock them, stock the parts, pinions, gears, bearings, seals & gaskets, splined outputs, shafts, housing adaptors/reducers, and pilot bearing holders. With little or no changes, these new clutch/gear reduction assemblies could fit your gas or diesel engine - 50-100hp. Five different gear ratios. A valuable link between your engine and power take-off shaft equipment.

CLUTCH / 5.8:1 Planetary Gear Reduction Assemblies

For 8-30 HP Engines
Fits most — Honda, Robin, Kohler, Kawasaki, others (1–2 cyl.)

- Fits most standard crankshafts – 1", 1⅛", 1⅞"
- Aluminum Castings/Housings
- Ball & roller bearings, hardened gears

Complete

When your operation needs a small rectangular baler you can count on for rugged, dependable performance, choose a New Idea 7200 Series baler. All four models incorporate true centerline design, so hay flows gently, consistently and efficiently, reducing leaf loss and crop damage. A prepacker chamber behind the pickup ensures more uniform bale density and consistent flake size. So every 14" x 18" or 16" x 18" bale is built solid, square shouldered — and packed with value. To learn more, visit your New Idea dealer today.

Study Reconfirms Ileitis As No. 1 Swine Disease

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — A new study finds agreement among pork producers, veterinarians and feed industry representatives that ileitis is the most-targeted disease on farms today. The finding confirms an ongoing, deep concern about ileitis and its negative effects on performance, mortality and pig flow.

Part of the reason for ileitis' number-one ranking may center on its pervasive nature, as earlier studies found 96.2 percent of U.S. tested herds were positive for the bacteria causing ileitis — Lawsonia intracellularis. Ileitis commonly strikes pigs from 50 pounds up to market weight.

Of the 200 participants surveyed in the new study, underwritten by Elanco Animal Health, more reported having current on-farm battles against ileitis than respiratory disease, including mycoplasma. This was also true for salmonella and hemorrhagic bowel syndrome. Another finding from the study showed 86 percent of the respondents viewed Tylan® Premix as the best product for ileitis control. In addition, study participants rated Tylan highest in overall satisfaction compared to other products.

Previous studies, which asked swine veterinarians about ileitis, may also shed light on why the industry appears to be unified in its fight against the disease. Some of these findings included:

- Ileitis-caused variation translates into average losses of $8.11 per head.
- 99.2 percent of veterinarians observe increased variation due to ileitis.
- 80.2 percent of veterinarians think ileitis is as bad, or worse than it was five years ago. while 14.9 percent say ileitis is less of a problem.

Dr. Tom Marsteller, swine technical consultant for Elanco, says producers can limit the negative impact of ileitis by implementing a comprehensive herd-health program developed with cooperation between the producer, veterinarian and feed supplier.

For many operations, Dr. Marsteller recommends the prudent use of Tylan Premix in swine rations at 100 grams per ton for 21 days for the prevention and control of ileitis. He also points to the product's zero withdrawal as a benefit in complying with Pork Quality Assurance guidelines.

Additionally, Marsteller reminds producers they can use Paylean®, as indicated, while using Tylan to prevent and control ileitis. Thanks to a recent clearance issued by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), producers can add Paylean to the finishing feed to speed pigs to market with increased carcass weight, increased yields and improved feed efficiency.

The new Kubota KX 121 Series III Excavators are now at Hoober

Kubota
Better Results... Every Time.

- Load Sensing Hydraulics-uniquely designed hydraulic system ensures speed under light loads and power under heavy loads.
- Featuring an offset boom, ideal for trenching next to or around existing structures. The long reach puts the bucket right into tight spaces while minimizing repositioning time.
- Complete with pilot controls, a two-pattern selection system, suspension seat and new hose connections between the boom/blade cylinders.

Everlast laps better.

Announcing

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds
- Can be used for dust control purposes
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat
- Vegetable based product
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products

Custom Manure Hauling
Reduced compaction provides you with healthier crops and higher yields. We offer the flotation of a farm tractor & spreader or try our new truck tractor & trailer tanker. Combine the road speed of a truck (a tractor's greatest limitation) with nearly the same flotation as a tractor & spreader. It will go anywhere our tractor will.
Custom Tillage
We also offer a deep tillage service if you find yourself having to do something about compacted ground. We have a 9-tooth Sunflower chisel fitted with 5 chisel teeth and 4 ripper Shanks. You have the choice of 4 inch twisted shovels for good residue coverage or 2 inch straight points for less coverage. All of our customers who have had used this have been very pleased with the results.

INJECTORS

Have you serviced yours?

Bad Injectors Cause:

- Excessive Fuel Consuption
- Poor Starting
- Loss Of Power
- Misfiring
- Black Smoke
- Overheating

So service them regularly!

As always, injectors are checked free of charge
